Helene of Seattle.
Poor Kangaroo Baby.
With Bow and Arrow.
Earth's Greatest News.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH, SAN SIMEON, Cal., Aug. 16.

HELENE MADISON, of Seattle, champion woman swimmer of the world, is at present, four p. m., swimming and diving in the pool on this ranch. She flew up from Los Angeles this morning with Royal Brougham, of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and tall young Mr. Schwegler, saw the pool, and said:

"I want to swim."

The London omnibus driver spent his only holiday in the year riding over his own route, beside another bus driver, enjoying the fact that he was not driving. Helene Madison enjoys the fact that she is swimming, but not racing. In training she is not allowed to dive, for that stiffens the ankles that must be absolutely loose and relaxed for the crawl stroke.

You would travel a long way to see that girl champion swim fifty yards at top speed, or dive, "swan" fashion, and rise with half her body out of water.

MR. SCHWEGLER, young Seattle giant, 6 feet 4, 210 pounds, swam against Miss Madison and did not win, although he had two seconds start in fifty yards and she seemed not anxious to beat him.

IT WOULD have delighted any eugenist to see that young couple. Her last race of the Olympics did not seem to satisfy Miss Madison. Said she:

"I could not seem to get going in the 400 meters."

However, she got going well enough to win the race against the best women swimmers of the world, and set a new world record.

CANADA'S agreements with Great Britain on tariff and business preferences are published and show that the "trade within the Empire" plan has reality back of it.

Canada sells to this country more than to all the British Empire and must have considered carefully the probable consequences of making ours a decidedly less favored nation.

Production of white paper from quick growing pine in the South, needing only eleven years for regrowth, against thirty years for northern forests, is one of the things to be considered.

BABY KANGAROOS born here this spring are learning how some of our best stock speculators have felt since 1929.

At first, the little kangaroo lives in a pouch on its mother's front, just below the forelegs. As time passes, the baby gets bigger, the pouch does not, and finally the kangaroo baby finds that he can no longer climb into the pouch. His struggles are pathetic, something like a speculator trying to even up.

Finally he decides to be a kangaroo on his own account. The speculator must do the same.

IN CANNES, on the edge of the blue little Mediterranean, a monkey escaped from a gypsy camp, went to a fashionable tennis club and immediately bit Miss Rosizka Dolly, one of the famous dancing twins, and Miss Peggy Joyce, also well known.

Walter Howey, who is here, says Darwin will be interested in that. If he had not been man's half brother, the monkey could not possibly have had the intelligence and artistic taste to pick out Miss Roszika and Miss Peggy, when the whole Riviera was before him, to bite.

TWENTY MILES back in the mountains two bow and arrow enthusiasts, Howard Hill, of Alabama, and Opa Locka, Florida, and a young friend are proving that the arrow will do all that bullets can do, by shooting deer, coyotes and other game.

The arrow will kill at one hundred and fifty yards. Unlike the rifle, it makes no noise. Does not frighten other deer in the herd, and the stricken deer, not knowing whence the blow comes, will often stand, awaiting the second arrow.

Nothing is more dreadful than killing beautiful inoffensive creatures, but men's lives have depended on successful killing for a million years, and with youth, as with the adults that have never matured, it is useless to protest.

AS WAS TO BE expected, the Republican party will continue to be the prohibition party, in a feeble way. Dr. Poling, head of the prohibition forces, says he will stand with the Republicans, because Republican victory "will safeguard some of the gains made under the Eighteenth Amendment."

Let us hope it will not safeguard the gains in bootlegging, racketeering, gangster crime and drunkenness among children.

A NEW HAPSBURGER baby is born, Prince Stefan, grandson of Queen Marie, of Roumania, son of Archduke Anton of Hapsburg and Princess Ileana, of Roumania.

As a prince, the baby will probably not be important. Few thrones will be inhabited when he is full grown, and many more princes may be working in Henry Ford's factory.

Most interesting about this new Hapsburg is the fact that his own mother nurses him. The baby weighed 7.7 pounds, a fair average, and measured twenty-one inches from head to toes.

THE MANUFACTURERS' sales tax is coming. You may write it in your tablets, or bet on it, if you prefer. The retail sales tax, which would cause endless confusion, and be unworkable, is NOT coming, nor any general application of the

Cox Firm Against 'Rebels'

By DAVE JONES
Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—Threat of a split in the ranks of the Jobless-Liberty Party loomed today as the Rev. Dr. James R. Cox led his "Blue Shirt Army" into this city.

To dissenters in the Liberty Party who have expressed a desire to nominate Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, as their presidential candidate, Father Cox said:

"If the Liberty party does not join with us we will go on alone. We will name our own candidates. They have been invited to join with us, but we will go by ourselves if necessary.

NO COMPROMISE

"There is to be no compromise. If they don't care to join with us they can paddle their own canoe.

"We don't intend to back track on anything we said, but at the same time we will be reasonable.

"Alone we may get one vote or 50,000,000."

As the caravan halted at Effingham, Ill., early today, prior to the entrance into St. Louis, it was estimated that less than 1,000 men, women and children were in the ranks. Father Cox, however, claimed Attorney Austin Staley,

VETS INDICTED FOR RIOTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—(INS.)—The grand jury which investigated the "bonus riot" of July 28 today indicted three veterans on charges of assaulting policemen, but ignored charges of high officials that Communist agitators inspired the clash between police and veterans.

The grand jury inquiry was undertaken on demand of Attorney General Mitchell after the bonus marchers had been evicted from their camps by federal troops using bayonets and tear gas and the camps burned.

The indictments against the three veterans—John O. Olson, of Valparaiso, Neb.; Bernard McCoy, of Chicago and Broadcus Faulkner, alias Brotis Saulkner—were expected. They are now in jail.

McCoy faces the most serious charge. He was indicted on charges of assault with intent to kill and felonious assault on Patrolman James E. Scott. The maximum penalty under the charges is 15 years in prison.

The failure of the grand jury to name known Communists thus was accepted as an indication of the collapse of the anti-red drive instituted after eviction of the marchers

White House Gets Police Radio Set

This was done at the suggestion of the secret service, who frequently complained of lack of information during the bonus riots of several weeks ago.

SALES TAX FOR RELIEF SPEEDED

Six Months Levy of 1 Per Cent Pushed In Legislature

HARRISBURG, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The House of Representatives today stuck closely to the new harmony plan of raising from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 unemployment relief by a general 1 per cent sales tax, as the Rules Committee arranged to frame a resolution for formal adjournment today.

Close to the end of the eighth week of the special session called for this purpose, the members resisted attempts to deflect them from the course plotted by a sudden union of all legislative factions last night.

In the most important test, the House defeated, 96 to 90, the Witkin-Blumberg bill to divert $12,000,000 from the motor license fund for unemployment relief.

The bill, supported by the Philadelphia Republican organization, had been threatened previously with a veto by Gov. Pinchot, who assailed it as a subterfuge by which money would be shifted from the state's highway work relief pocket to that of direct relief.

CIGARET TAX SHELVED

The House also sent back to committee the cigaret tax bill and advanced the Hagmier sales tax measure to final consideration for tomorrow.

The latter would impose the 1 per cent levy on all sales except those of farmers direct to consumers, during the six months starting September 1.

The tax would be payable by dealers, on or before April 1, 1933. Dealers would be permitted to shift the tax directly to consumers by posting the tax rate along with the price of the merchandise sold.

The bill now in this final form, the House set tomorrow at 11:30

LINK WOMAN IN WALKER INQUIRY

Mayor Says Sherwood Handled Affairs for 'Unknown Person'

BULLETIN.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The name of Betty Compton, the actress, was unofficially linked with the "unknown person" of the Walker investigation today when Mayor Walker, answering reporters' inquiries if it were Miss Compton, replied:

"Wo do you suppose it was?"

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Gov. Roosevelt's investigation of Mayor Walker today probed close to the identity of the "unknown person," who figures in the inquiry, when the Mayor revealed that the mysterious recipient of money was a women.

When Gov. Roosevelt observed that the evidence showed that a letter of credit for $10,000 was arranged for the same "unknown person" to whom Russell T. Sherwood, missing accountant, paid $7,5d0, Walker said:

"I know nothing about the letter of credit. I do know that Sherwood handled income matters for the 'unkonwn person,' and an examination of her accounts would show she had several bank accounts in the city."

The identity of the "unknown person" has been scruplously guarded by Samuel Seabury, investigator for the Hafstadter Legislative Committee.

HANGS HIMSELF IN MT. LEBANON

Three hours after posting a letter to his wife begging her forgiveness, the body of Charles K. Schmidt, 56, was found hanging from a joist in the basement of his home at 200 Bower Hill road, Mt. Lebanon.

Schmidt's body was found by a daughter, Mrs. Irene L. Justice, after receipt of the letter, which said he was driven to the act "by troubles." Members of the family also said Schmidt had been in ill health.

The letter bore a stamp cancellation bearing the hour of 4 a. m. It had apparently been mailed by Schmidt during the night. He appeared depressed this morning, the family said. A short time later he disappeared.

Schmidt was restaurant manager of the H. J. Heinz Company.

BIRTH TRAILS TRAGEDY BY 5 MONTHS

Mother and New Heir Reported Well; Crime Recalled

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Another son was born to the Charles A. Lindberghs today, bringing happiness back to a home long darkened by deepest tragedy.

Five months and 16 days after 20-month-old Charles Lindbergh, Jr., was stolen from his crib to meet his death while all the world sought him, the second baby was born at 7:30 a. m Pittsburgh time.

Only the fact that the second son had been born was immediately available, but it was generally understood that the baby and its mother were both in good health.

BETTY GOW TO NURSE

The child was born in the Dwight W. Morrow home where the first baby was born and Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, was present, having recently returned from Europe.

Although no statement was forthcoming on this point the probability was considered that the new baby's nurse would be Betty Gow, the Scottish girl, who was the first baby's nurse and who first discovered the kidnaping.

Miss Gow was questioned at length after the kidnaping as were all the Lindbergh servants and her sailor suitor, Henry Johnson, was detained for a long time and finally deported. The Lindberghs always expressed complete faith in her. She is at present on a visit to her home in Scotland.

TRAGEDY RECALLED

The Lindgerghs' first baby was 20 months old when he was kidnaped and would have been a little more than two years old now if he had lived. His body was found near the Lindbergh home, after a world wide search and officials believed he had been killed by the kidnapers perhaps accidentally, almost immediately after he was stolen from his nursery.

The first baby was a chubby boy with blue eyes, fair complexion, and golden, curly hair. He resembled the famous aviator closely. The end of his life came when he was just beginning to toddle.

The fact that Mrs. Lindbergh was expecting a second child became generally known only after the first son was kidnaped. She was under constant medical care during the long search for the baby and his kidnapers, and had been in retirement since her re-

MARKET'S EARLY GAINS CUT

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Securities prices again surged forward in fresh waves of buying today, but met persistent selling on the rallies. A number of the rails and a few industrials pushed up to new high levels for the summer recovery, but fell back under later pressure.

The bond market moved ahead impressively.

Cotton featured the commodities, moving up nearly $1 a bale to new high for the recovery. Several other commodities were somewhat higher, wheat, after advancing about a cent a bushel, had a sharp setback.

Stocks had a buoyant opening, when trading hit a feverish pace, but during the next few hours, the general list failed to equal the high levels of the first few minutes, although a number of the rails were bid up smartly in the middle of the day. They gave ground with the others in the last hour.

Prices of New York Stock Exchange seats boomed along with those of securities, a transfer being arranged at $150,000 an advance $30,000 above the previous transfer.

Rumor of Walker Resignation Denied

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(INS.)—Recurring rumors that Mayor James J. Walker would resign was characterized as "bunk" today by his attorney, John C. Curtin.

The rumor was to the effect that Walker would step out in order that he might run in a special election in November.

Record Cited as Lawyer Pleads for Lancaster

By LARRY SMITS
International News Service.

COURTHOUSE, MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 16.—Capt. William N. Lancaster's "honorable record as a soldier" and the asserted failure of the state to furnish proof of guilt, was the structure on which Chief Defense Counsel James M. Carson today based his plea for the acquittal of the British flier, charged with the murder of Haden Clarke.

Carson resumed final argument in the trial today as the case neared the jury after two weeks of sensational testimony. He said:

"The state says if Capt. Lancaster did not kill Haden Clarke, he ought to have killed him.

"The state says that. We don't. The prosecution sees in his undying love for Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller a motive for Clarke's death. We have not undertaken to deny this love.

"But this man was for years a professional soldier of honorable record.

"Look through his record, his diaries, his letters and his testimony and see if you can find the slightest taint or suspicion of cowardice."

Mrs. Keith-Miller, the woman in the weird triangle, was seated in an obscure corner, listening to every word.

Deploring her morals, Carson praised the courage of Mrs. Keith-Miller in the highest terms. He said:

"Here is a woman whose bravery has focused upon her the eyes of all the world. Her weaknesses, for many years secret, were brought out in this court. Only because of her matchless gallantry has it been made public."

Wales O. K.'s Fleet, Tars Get More Rum

CORFU, Greece, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, inspected the Mediterranean fleet yesterday and said everything was satisfactory.

At the conclusion of their visit the signal "splice the main brace" was hoisted, which meant, in nonnautical terms, that all hands would get an extra portion of rum.

Flier Believed Lost, Safe at Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—R. S. Sague, flier who was reported lost on a Cleveland-to-Washington flight yesterday after he had taken off from Bettis Field, Pittsburgh, flew safely into Washington Airport today. He said he had spent the night at Willow Mills Pa., after darkness had found him in the air without a guiding plane.

Dog Races Abandoned At Bridgeville Track

All plans for dog racing at Bridgeville have been abandoned, it was learned today.

The races were to have started last night with a schooling program. Then it was announced the opening would not be until Thursday.

The races were thrown over after it became known that District Attorney Andrew T. Park had ordered six detectives to prevent all wagering.

This probably will be a disappointment to State Senator James J. Coyne, who asked the Pittsburgh Welfare Fund to sponsor the races and accept a share of the profits. The association turned down the offer. Bridgeville relief groups were to share all profits of the dog track.

HARRIS TO LEAD BATTLE FOR OPEN QUIZ

2 Senators Slated on Board Lose Seats In December

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 16.—Republican organization plans for an investigation of the Public Service Commission and its alleged relations with public utilities, call for the selection of Senator William S. Rial, of Westmoreland County as chairman of the inquisitors. Rial tonight will introduce a resolution for an investigation. A substitute for the resolution introduced last week by Senator Frank J. Harris.

The organization wishes the committee constituted as it was for the abortive investigation which led to the resignation of Chairman W. D. B. Ainey, of the commission, under the fire of charges by Gov. Pinchot that he had received gratuities either from utilities or their officials. That committee comprised Senators Coyne, Earnest, Buckman, Clippinger, Salus and Roberts, in addition to Rial.

RIAL "LAME DUCK"

Rial is a lame duck who will not be a member of the Senate, as is Earnest. Their inclusion on the committee means that its work must be completed by December 1, when the terms of both expire. It is anticipated that an appropriation of $150,000 for the purposes of the investigation will be included in the resolution.

Immediate passage of the resolution is improbable. Harris, whose resolution is to be sidetracked because the Republican organization wants the inquiry in the hands of its friends, plans to object to immediate consideration, and force reference of the resolution to the Appropriations Committee, where the Harris resolution was sent last week.

If that course is followed by the Pittsburgh senator, he will follow with a demand that a meeting of the full appropriation committee be called, putting every member on record as between his demand for an investigation, and that to be sponsored by Rial.

COMMITTEE CRITICISED

The Appropriations Committee, the chairman of which is Senator Harry B. Scott, of Centre County, is comprised of 46 of the 50 members of the Senate. It has not held a meeting for three years. Harris charged last week, its decisions being the opinion of the chairman only, motivated by two or three of the leading members of the Republican organization.

If Harris is able to secure a meeting of the committee the reasons for sidetracking his resolution will be fought out by that group before coming to the floor. Harris plans to insist upon the reporting of his own resolution, with with an amendment for an appropriation.

However the committee is constituted, it will go back to the beginning of the Public Service Commission. It will devote special attention to the charges of Gov. Pinchot that Ainey was assisted in paying his bills by the late A. W. Thompson when head of the Philadelphia Company, Pittsburgh utility holding corporation, and the late T. E. Mitten, boss of the Philadelphia traction interests.

BENN UNDER FIRE

It also will delve into the bank accounts of former Commissioner James S. Benn, who resigned in 1931 under the fire of the Governor. Now the Governor charges that Benn banked huge sums on a salary of $10,000 a year, laying away more than $300,000 in one three-year period.

In a statement last night the Governor insisted that Attorney General William A. Schnader should be employed as counsel for an investigating committee, and that the committee should be sufficiently impartial to obtain the confidence of the people in its sincerity. The Harris resolution specifically states that Schnader shall be counsel.

Democrats to Talk Over Campaign Debt

The meeting will be followed by another in the afternoon with members of the finance committee, who will plan the financing of the Roosevelt campaign.

PINCHOT HAILS BILL

Gov. Pinchot, with whom leaders of all factions conferrred last night in reaching agreement on the measure, today hailed the bill as the sole hope of the special session. If the Legislature fails to enact it, he declared, unemployment relief in Pennsylvania will have a "slim chance" of becoming an actuality.

The chief executive said he was "exceedingly anxious" for its passage and termed it "the only possible way by which we can get money that is absolutely necessary for unemployment relief."

Recalling his unsuccessful appeal for $45,000,000 federal aid, the Governor said the refusal of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to advance money to the state "made it perfectly clear that Pennsylvania must provide immediate cash if we are to share as we should in the relief money the corporation controls."

He declared it would be "nothing but foolishness" to shut the door in the face of possible federal contribution by defeating the sales tax proposal.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Russell N. Boardman, trans-Atlantic flier and world's distance record holder, who now seeks the world speed crown for airplanes, reached a speed of 275 miles an hour in his specially constructed Gee Bee plane here yesterday.

Lollypop Proves To Be Block Of Wood

"I can't bite it."

Her father said:

"Wait until it melts."

But the lollypop remained hard and firm, and close inspection disclosed that it was a block of wood painted brown. Sherman is looking for the salesman.

BENN TO FIGHT PINCHOT

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—James S. Benn, Pennsylvania attorney and former member of the state's Public Service Commission, told the Daily Express today he was sailing for the United States tomorrow to fight the charge of Gov. Pinchot that he banked $650,000 during his 10 years in office.

Benn said that he and Gov. Pinchot had been "deadly political enemies" for 20 years.

Benn has been in Europe for six weeks negotiating certain steel interests in behalf of American clients. He said he was cutting his trip short to "make Pinchot swallow his charges."

BLAST OF DUST ROCKS VALLEY

The upper Allegheny Valley was rocked early today by an explosion that damaged a unit in the bronzing plant of the United States Aluminum Company at Logan's Ferry.

The blast was followed by a fire, and the unit was blocked off with sand to prevent it from spreading. A company estimate indicated the damage would be $40,000. The unit damaged occupies an area 100x30 feet. The blast was caused by unexplained ignition of aluminum dust in the air.

None was injured. The explosion occurred five minutes before two men were to begin work in the unit. The plant watchman said he had visited the unit a moment before the blast. The force of the blast blew off the roof and damaged the heavy brick walls.

New Kensington and other police and fire departments stood by. The blaze could not be fought with water. After the building was isolated by sand, the flames were permitted to burn themselves out.

It was the third explosion in the plant this year. In February three men were burned, not seriously, when a blast occurred. Another workman was injured in March.

Police Fraternity Names Committees

Consideration of resolutions and naming of committees today was on the program of the sixteenth annual convention of the Fraternal Order of Police in session at Fort Pitt Hotel. The convention opened yesterday with 500 delegates from many sections of the country in attendance.

BOURBON SLAIN BY WOMAN IN PARIS

Prince's Throat Cut In Laborer's Hotel, Companion Held

International News Service.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—A man identified by police as Prince Edgar de Bourbon, member of the Austrian branch of the family which ruled almost all of continental Europe for 1,000 years, was found dead in a small hotel today, his throat slashed by a razor.

The police identification card found among the dead man's effects indicated he was married to an American woman named Clara de Cosse Eringer. He was 62.

Police learned the prince and Senorita Brausoler, who is 39, often visited the hotel, a dilapidated structure located at No. 9 Rue Bouloi, a street only one block long in the market quarter of the city.

The place is frequented by the laboring classes and has no telephone.

WILDA BENNETT PLACED IN CELL

ALLENHURST, N. J., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Wilda Bennett, musical comedy dancer, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct early today after she had appeared twice at the police station, clad in a bathrobe, to complain of a disturbance at her home.

Police said it required the efforts of three officers to subdue her and place her in a cell on her second appearance. She will be arraigned tomorrow.

WOMAN LINKED IN WALKER QUIZ

John J. Curtin, counsel to the Mayor, fought to obtain the secret evidence compiled by the Tammany investigators, but his demand went unanswered as the Governor moved quickly to a scrutiny of letters of credit that Sherwood obtained.

Curtin had particularly desired to look over the Seabury accountants' work sheets to find out how the Hofstadter investigator reached his conclusion that Sherwood paid out large sums of money for the Mayor. Roosevelt refused to ask for the work sheets.

NO RECORD OF CASH

Throughout the morning session, Roosevelt sought to untangle the evidence involving Walker's relations with Sherwood, whom Seabury never was able to question. Walker testifying and Curtin arguing, contended that Sherwood, an employe of Walker's former law firm, as a "courtesy" made out checks for Walker's relatives. Each time, however, the Mayor reimbursed him with cash, Walker said. Roosevelt asked Walker:

"Have you any record of the amounts in cash you gave Sherwood?"

The Mayor replied:

"No. I haven't even kept my own check book."

The Mayor likely will fight the rest of his battle for exoneration without his wife. Mrs. Walker, who attended the first day of the hearing, became ill on last Thursday night. She collapsed while attending mass yesterday. Walker said she would return to New York today accompanied by the family physician, Dr. William Schroeder, chairman of the City Sanitation Commission.

TRACE $25,000 CHECKS

The Governor, soon after the hearing opened, began to trace the movement of two checks for $25,000, payable to Mayor Walker, and drawn on his brokerage account with Paul Block, the publisher. The checks were dated June 9 and June 16, 1927.

The Mayor said he received the money on the checks, indorsed them and returned them to Sailing Baruch & Co., the brokerage firm which handled the Block-Walker account. The Mayor said with emphasis:

"I never gave those two payments of $25,000 cash to Russel T. Sherwood for deposit anywhere."

Walker said Sherwood gave checks to his sister, Mrs. Nan Walker Burke, of Far Rockaway, but that he gave the accountant the money to cover them. The Governor reminded Walker that checks Mrs. Burke received were drawn on Sherwood's account at the Central Hanover Trust Company.

LOSES FIGHT FOR RECORDS

Curtin disputed Seabury's interjection that the records do not show the Mayor reimbursed Sherwood in cash. Curtin shouted:

"I beg your pardon! I beg your pardon! I have seen it."

Curtin said:

"Under date of January 2, 1929, you'll find a deposit of $800 in Sherwood's account, and January 4 you'll find a withdrawal of the same amount."

Walker said:

"The reason why the matter was handled through Sherwood was a family one. I hinted at it in the hearing."

FRANCES STARR WEDS BANKER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—Only yesterday a bridesmaid, today a bride, appeared to be the modern version of an old proverb for Frances Starr, actress.

And Ruth Chatterton, screen performer, at whose wedding to George Brent Miss Starr was a bridesmaid, turned right about and acted as one for her friend.

COX OPPOSING PINCHOT BOOM BY REBELS

now in St. Louis concluding arrangements for the national convention, has proxies from 50,000 members of the "Blue Shirt Army," which may be cast at the meeting.

FIRST NEWS OF SPLIT

First reports of the threatened split in the ranks of the heretofore united organization came during a brief halt in Indianapolis where J. A. Hackley, founder of the Liberty party in Indiana, announced his followers supported the Pennsylvania Governor.

Hackley expressed surprise that the Pittsburgh priest was serious in seeking the nomination.

Father Cox, denying an acquaintance with Hackley, said the suggestion of Gov. Pinchot's name was "news to him."

The crucial test of the solidity of the two factions, it became apparent today, would come in the manner of holding the convention. William Hope (Coin) Harvey, of Monte Ne, Ark., leader of the Liberty party and its presidential nominee, wants Father Cox to agree to the election of electors to select the presidential nominee and other candidates.

SCORNS ELECTOR PLAN

The priest's reply to this proposition was:

"It's silly, this business of selecting electors instead of naming a candidate. It would take half a century to get anywhere by that procedure."

The 80-year-old leader of the Liberty party in a statement issued in St. Louis, where his party awaited the coming of Father Cox's "army" said:

"We are here to confer and decide whether we will enter the convention."

He said his party had been invited to merge with the Jobless Party but never had taken any action.

As the "Blue Shirt Army" prepared to leave its overnight camp at Effingham, the priest, in a brief talk, attacked Police Chief Gerk, of St. Louis, and Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Chief Gerk, one of those seeking to stop the meeting, has shown that he is not competent to handle the crowd, Father Cox said.

HEALTH CONDITIONS MET

Concerning Gen. MacArthur Father Cox said he was going to draft a resolution asking a congressional medal for the Army man for "his great feat in driving the defenseless bonus army out of Washington.

A telephone call to Father Cox from N. G. Baster, one of his lieutenants in St. Louis, said health authorities there had withdrawn their objections to the meeting and there would be no court action to stop it. Baster said the authorities were satisfied that health conditions at Creve Coeur Speedway had been met.

His left ankle fractured when he was caught between the bumpers of a moving freight train of the Pennsylvania Railroad, near West Carson street, last night, John Morrissey, 21, of Cheswick, was in Allegheny General Hospital today. Morrissey was on his way to attend Father James R. Cox' Jobless party convention in St. Louis.

Aerial Bombs Fire House, Menace Boat

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—Two bombs dropped by Naval Reserve aviators during practice over Canarsie Bay today landed wide of the target, one tearing through the roof of the porch of a home nearly a mile away, and the other endangering a crowded excursion boat.

One bomb, aimed at a target on Center Island, more than half a mile off shore, tore through the porch of Philip Schwab's home in Canarsie, while Schwab, his wife and two children were inside the house.

The bomb tore a 14-inch hole through the roof, burst into fragments, which were scattered for 200 yards, and set fire to the house when its smoke fuse exploded.

A few minutes later another bomb landed within 50 feet of a loaded excursion steamer off Center Island about 500 yards. As the bombing target was set about 1,000 yards inside the island, this bomb dropped nearly a mile from the target.

Women and children aboard the boat began screaming, and the craft yawed off her course and sped away.

Foster Raps Candidates, Political Systems

In a shabby little room, a tall man with an iron jaw and sharp blue eyes cracked right and left at Presidential aspirants incidentally, but particularly at the system they represent.

William Z. Foster, himself a candidate, on the Communist ticket, half sprawled on a worn desk, while beside him, silent and motionless, sat his running mate, James W. Ford, Alabama Negro.

Foster began to talk relief, wage cuts, political systems.

He said:

"The United States is moving towards dictatorship. The capitalist system has burst. The stock market rise is hooey. There'll be another cut in steel workers' wages, and cuts in the workers of the building trades, metal trades, all workers.

"The candidates are all talking. But what they say is not important. It's what they do.

"Father Cox? He is cutting off relief; by his movement, eliminating the struggle of the needy for adequate relief. I hope to prove it, for I'm now challenging him to a debate wherever he dictates September 21, when my swing of the country will return me here.

"Pinchot? He's a fakir and a demogogue. He talks big, but what has he demanded for the unemployed from the Legislature?

"And Norman Thomas, the Socialist. Better, the Social Democrat. He could be president and there'd be no difference, no change. It would be like Ramsay McDonald in England."

GERMANY HEADED FOR CHAOS, HITLER WARNS VON PAPEN

NAZIS' LEADER WILL KEEP UP BATTLE

No Compromise, Stand Of Fascist; Scores Chancellor

MUNICH, Germany, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The activity of the present German government under Chancellor Franz von Papen is "leading straight to chaos," Adolf Hitler, National Socialist chief, said here today.

The statement was Hitler's first personal utterance since his dramatic refusal last Saturday to enter the cabinet in a secondary role. He said:

"My followers would never have understood it if I had accepted the compromise suggested by President Von Hindenburg."

WILL CONTINUE FIGHT

The Nazi leader said his followers would continue to oppose the government. Hitler added:

"As to the fate of the Von Papen cabinet, that is something about which the Chancellor himself had better be asked. We know how we are going to continue the fight. We are willing to support any government as long as the national movement is helped and the Marxist (Communist) movement is weakened. When the government ceases to help the national cause we oppose it sharply."

The chancellorship, the Nazi chieftain said, was his right in view of the strength of his movement, demonstrated in the recent election. Continuing, he snapped:

"I'll never sell my movement for a mess of pottage. On matters of principle there can be no compromise. One cannot expect heroism from a people if the leaders make 'bearable' compromises."

TELLS OF REFUSAL

He gave some interesting sidelights on what happened during the momentous hour last Saturday when he turned down the government offer.

He said he was unwilling to go to call on President von Hindenburg because he considered that, according to the constitution, the President's duty to take a hand in the formation of a new cabinet came only after the resignation of the Chancellor.

He regarded Chancellor Von Papen's "dragging in" Von Hindenburg as an attempt to shift the responsibility to the President's shoulders, he said.

Hitler claimed many thousands of his followers have been assaulted by the Communists. During 1931, he said, 6,000 were attacked and during 1932 thus far 300 were killed and 8,200 seriously injured. He said:

"That proves our martyrdom."

Famous Parents and Their First Baby, Whose Death Was the World's Sorrow

COL.-MRS. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH . . . FLYING COMPANIONS

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, JR. . . . AT AGE OF A FEW WEEKS

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, JR. . . . ON HIS FIRST BIRTHDAY

Son Born to Lindys 5 Months After Crime

ATTENDED BY SPECIALISTS

Mrs. Lindbergh was attended, while awaiting birth of her second child, by Dr. Edward Hawkes, the specialist who attended her at the birth of her first child. Dr. Hawkes was in frequent consultation on the case also with Dr. Edward H. Dennen and three other specialists.

Mrs. Mororw, after the first baby had been found dead and Mrs. Lindbergh had given proof of such fortitude that it was decided it was perfectly safe to leave her, went for a brief visit abroad with others of her children and only recently returned to be with Mrs. Lindbergh at this time.

Mrs. Lindbergh astounded the world, from the very moment her first baby was kidnaped, by the strength with which she met the tragic siutation into which fate threw her so soon after the death of her father, Senator Morrow, who died last year while she and Col. Lindbergh were making a flying tour of the Far East.

AIDED SEARCHERS

So far as could be learned Mrs. Lindbergh continued about her household duties even from the first, making herself of service to all the searchers for her baby, who made the Lindbergh home their headquarters.

The first Lindbergh baby was born on Mrs. Lindbergh's twenty-fourth birthday. She is now just 26 years old. Col. Lindbergh is 30 years old.

Despite the tragedies which have marked their lives, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh have remained practically unchanged in appearance since they first came into world prominence.

Col. Lindbegh is in appearance still the curly-headed young man who made the world gasp with the exploit of his flight to France. He still likes to go bareheaded and his tall, thin figure has not filled out with the years. He is still boyish in general appearance just as his wife has retained all the youthful appearance of her girlhood.

STILL SHY, GRACIOUS

To those who know her well Mrs. Lindbergh still seems the gentle, shy, gracious girl who before her marriage moved gracefully about the campus of Smith College, taking honors in scholarship, and in her idle moments writing poems which often appeared in the college magazine.

Col. Lindbergh, from the moment on that blustery March night when he first discovered his first son was missing, has sought assuagement of his grief in constant activity of one sort or another.

Up to the time the baby's body was found he was always in the van of the searchers, himself directing various phases of the hunt for the kidnapers and attempting negotiations with them through the agency, among others, of Dr. John F. Condon, aged Bronx educator, and John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boatbuilder.

Through Dr. Condon, who had negotiated for return of the baby through newspaper advertisements signed "Jafsie," he paid a futile $50,000 ransom which Dr. Condon passed over a cemetery hedge in the Bronx.

RANSOM PAID

Payment of this money was followed, by direction of the people who received it, by a series of airplane flights by the distracted father in search of a boat on which the baby was said to be held. This boat was never found and Col. Lindbergh finally came to the conclusion that he had been duped and made public the numbers of all the ransom bills in the hope of thus tracing the people who had so cruelly deceived him.

He always expressed complete confidence in Dr. Condon.

After the baby's body was found, at which time Col. Lindbergh was on a boat following a clue given by Curtis, the Norfolk shipbuilder was arrested and charged with obstructing justice.

At a trial at which Col. Lindbergh was one of the principal witnesses, Curtis was convicted. He was sentenced to serve one year in prison and pay a fine of $1,000 and is now at liberty under bail pending appeal.

After the Curtis trial, Col. Lindbergh sought to occupy his mind by turning once more to business affairs and has spent much time daily at his own office on lower Broadway and in the offices of Pan-American Airways, in the Grand Central district, an international airline company of which he is technical director. Only yesterday he made a short test flight at Newark Airport of a new type of plane.

Englewood Honors Lindy Wish for Quiet

ENWLEWOOD, N. J., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Residents of Englewood received word of the birth of the Lindbergh baby today quietly. No crowd gathered at the gate of the Morrow estate as it did two years ago when the first baby was born. One resident explained:

"The Englewood people have learned that the Lindberghs don't want publicity. They are trying to be good neighbors by respecting that wish."

Lindbergh's Mother On Secret Journey

DETROIT, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, mother of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was said at her home here today to be out of the city. Members of her household would not say where she is.

Evicted From Home While Away on Visit

While Mrs. Senevich Pelphia, of 114½ Churchill street, McKees Rocks, visited friends yesterday, Paul Jonathan Kemp, a deputy sheriff and Alex Maslany, a cousin, broke a lock on the rear door and placed Mrs. Pelphia's household effects on the sidewalk. The deputy sheriff said the woman was ordered evicted after sale of the property to Mike Maslany, following foreclose of a $1,500 mortgage.

GUARDS AWAIT LINDY CALL

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, was out on field maneuvers with the National Guard today, but his assistant, Maj. Charles Schoeffel, said that a guard for the new Lindbergh baby would undoubtedly be furnished if requested.

He said that no such request had yet been made and there had been no indication that there was any intention of making it.

There was much speculation today as to what means Col. Lindbergh would take to guard against kidnaping of the new baby. No immediate steps in this direction would be necessary, however, as the Morrow home always has been fully guarded since the first Lindbergh baby was born there.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—Efforts to trace the $1,328,335 in unlisted certificates for 25,000 shares of a tobacco company stock stolen recently proved futile today.

SHOOTS WOMAN, KILLS SELF

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—An unclothed woman dashing into Times square screaming "He shot me!" brought police early today to the scene of a double shooting.

They found the body of a man in a room in the Hotel Tivoli. Two bullets had entered his head, and his hand clutched a revolver. Papers led police to believe he was Mathew Kulus, of Coney Island.

The woman, who said she was Muriel Olwell, 35, single, had been shot in the jaw and was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. Police said the man had engaged the room as her husband.

Burglar Suspect Held at Hearing

Joseph Victor, 26, of 244 East Jefferson street, was held for court charged with entering a building today by Magistrate J. J. Sweeney in North Side Police Court. Arthur Neel, of 206 West Stockton avenue, testified he and his wife seized Victor when he tried to enter their apartment.

MRS. M'CORMICK IMPROVING

They said she was gaining in strength and that yesterday her condition was more encouraging than it had been for some time. And Mrs. McCormick herself was confident. She said:

"I'm going to get well."

IOWA GUARDS BALK FARMERS

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Armed officers, abetted by many citizens, today kept roads open despite an attempted barricade by striking farmers, who seek to have all agricultural products withheld from market until higher prices can be obtained.

There was not great activity by farm strikers in other parts of the state, and no reports had been received that the embargo had spread to other states as planned by the leaders of the movement.

Comparative quiet prevailed on all fronts in the farmers' holiday strike as 75 special officers and more than a score of city policemen patrolled highways near Sioux City to safeguard truckers from interference by strike pickets.

Few truckers attempted to enter the city with milk, livestock, or other farm products.

PRIEST INSULTS QUEEN, BEATEN BY SHAH

Persian Mob Menaces Royal Worshiper For Lifting Veil

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A Mohammedan priest, said to have insulted her Majesty, the Queen of Persia, because she entered a shrine in western dress and prayed with her veil drawn back, was personally beaten by His Majesty, Shah Riza Khan Pahlevi, according to the Daily Herald today.

The Herald's correspondent in Teheran, Persia, reported the Queen went into a shrine at Meshed, in Northern Perkia, drew her veil aside, and knelt in prayer.

The unfortunate priest, not knowing the identity of the worshipper, rushed up and reviled the Queen for praying unveiled and also for wearing clothes of the western world.

A crowd assembled and, also unaware they were before their Queen, took the side of the priest and became hostile.

The Shah was notified by telephone and arrived at Meshed the following day. He stalked into the shrine and threw the priest to the floor, striking him. The priest later was fined.

FREE RECLUSES IN SLAYING

NATCHEZ, Miss., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Two eccentric neighbors of Jane Surget Merrill, aristocratic recluse, slain in her old plantation home, have been virtually exonerated of charges in the case. Police have concluded a Negro, himself since killed, shot and beat the woman to death.

The couple, Richard Dana and Octavia Dockery, once prominent in Southern society, were released from jail last night on their own recognizance. They had been held on murder charges because of tentative fingerprint studies.

The Negro, George Pearls, alias Lawrence Williams, was killed in Pine Bluff, Ark., a few days after Miss Merrill was slain, as he resisted arrest by officers who sought to question him.

Duncan H. Minor, friend of Miss Merrill, said the Negro had sought work and money from Miss Merrill and was refused.

LIBBY GUARDED IN RETREAT

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Aug. 16.—(Universal.)—As a sequel to the mysterious theft of the switch-key of the speedboat Water Boy, in which Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds had planned to forget trouble while waiting trial for the murder of her husband, extra guards were posted last night at Oakington.

Deputy sheriffts have been posted at strategic points about the estate at the request of Mrs. Louise Jenny, of Wilmington, Del., lessee of the estate and hostess to Mrs. Reynolds.

Because the strange theft is believed to have been engineered from the water, a yacht with a husky crew has been posted across the bay at the mouth of the Bohemia River, reputedly under charter of Mrs. Jenny.

Uncle Sam Sues Woman On 18-Year-Old Loan

In Federal Court, through United States Attorney Louis E. Graham, the government sued a Pittsburgh woman and her husband for $87.30 he says he lent her 18 years ago.

Named as defendants were Mrs. Dora Lowenthal and Bernard Lowenthal, of 535 Mellon street, East End.

Mrs. Lowenthal was in Europe in 1914 when the World War broke out. She borrowed about $167 from the United States Relief Commission, which advanced money to Americans to enable them to get home. Later she repaid $80.

Uncle Sam complained that he has made frequent demands on Mrs. Lowenthal for the balance.

The Uncle also wants interest for 14 years—which will just about equal the principal.

Girl Holdup Suspect Returned With Gang

A girl and four men, accused of holding up a downtown gasoline station, were brought back to Pittsburgh today from Harrisburg, where they had been arrested on a tip furnished by a hitch-hiker.

Two suspects, Joseph Russo, 24, and Ernest Zimmerman, 29, were identified by Max Neustein, night manager of the American Oil Company station at Third and Liberty avenues, and a friend Leo Pennington, the police announced. Pennington identified also Tony Lavia, 29.

The girl, Trudy Steiner, 19, and her husband, Lawrence Steiner, 29, were being held with the identified prisoners for hearing. They were arrested after the hiker, Robert Roach, of Lisbon, O., given a lift in an auto occupied by two of them, heard them talk of dividing their $35 loot.

Bail for each of the prisoners was set at $20,000 when detectives were informed by the police of New York, where the suspects live, that three men were en route to bail them out. The New York authorities said Lavia was at liberty on bail on a kidnapping charge.

PLOT TO WRECK TRAIN FOILED

KITTANNING, Pa., Aug. 16.—Railroad detectives today were investigating an apparent attempt to wreck Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train No. 930, running between Kittanning and Pittsburgh, Sunday, by removing a piece of rail.

The train, in charge of Engineer Robert Hayes and Conductor Harry Corman, both of Kittanning, was brought to a stop when flagged by a beacon tender of the United States government river forces at Edgecliff. Had the train struck the place where the rail had been removed, it likely would have been wrecked or plunged into the Allegheny River, railroad officers said.

CHINESE SLAY AMERICAN

PEIPING, China, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Lieut. Robert H. Soule, assistant military attache at the United States legation, reported from Sianfu today that Henry Ekval, an American employed by the China United States Motor Company, of Hankow, had been slain by Chinese soldiers near Sianfu last month.

The legation forwarded its third protest to Nanking and to the Shensi provincial authorities, urging prompt steps to apprehend the culprits.

Ekval was accompanied by the Rev. G. D. Tornvall, of the Swedish-Scandinavian Alliance Mission, with headquarters in Chicago. An unidentified Japanese also was with them. Lieut. Soule said his investigation indicated they had been robbed and murdered by Chinese soldiers, who threw their bodies into an abandoned well.

Boy Drowns in Pool While Father Dives

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—John Woelfle yielded to the pleas of his 7-year-old son, William, yesterday and took him to a swimming pool. The father left the boy standing in shallow water, holding to ropes with his 8-year-old sister, Helen, while he dived. When he came up the boy was gone. The sister had not missed him. The body was recovered in the center of the pool.

Navy to Continue 'Sub' Experiments

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Further experiments with the submarine S-4 on training naval personnel in the use of submarine rescue apparatus are to be conducted at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, it was announced today.

Every 25c You Spend at Donahoe's Helps Bring Visitors to Pittsburgh

Remember, a portion of every 25c purchase or over, that you make at any Donahoe Store goes to help pay the expenses of the American Legion State Convention which the American Legion of Allegheny County will bring to Pittsburgh Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

This Convention will cost the American Legion of Allegheny County many thousands of dollars in expense and, due to relief work during the past year, their funds are practically exhausted.

So Donahoe's have arranged to help the American Legion of Allegheny County financially—Donahoe's will pay a good portion of the convention expense, based upon purchases made by the public at any and all Donahoe stores up to and including Saturday, August 20, 1932.

DESTROY HALL OF ORANGEMEN

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, August 16.—(AP.)—The Alistagh Orangemen's hall near Armagh City was burned this morning. Explosives and gasoline were used.

The Orange hall at Caledon, on the Armagh-Tyrone border, was garrisoned Sunday night to prevent a Hibernian demonstration in the village yesterday.

state retail sales tax, reported to have worked well in Mississippi.

BERLIN sends the most important news of today, and of this century. If it means commercial release of energy that holds together the electrons and nucleus of the atom, with the added possibility of manufacturing the elements at will, gold, platinum, etc., it will be the greatest news of all time.

Two German scientists, Lange and Brasch, using an artificial "thunderbolt" of 2,500,000 volts, have split an atom of lead, releasing energy equivalent to fifteen million volts.

If you turned all the lead and iron in the world into gold, that would mean nothing. To release atomic energy would mean everything, for it would provide power unlimited, like water and air.

THE ENERGY locked up in the atoms of oxygen and hydrogen in two teaspoonfuls of water would drive the steamship Leviathan twice across the ocean.

But do not sell your coal mines or good oil stocks. Things move slowly. A little steam engine was shown in Alexandria in the Serapion, long before the birth of Christ. But man waited long for the steamboat and locomotive.

HOW THAT atomic energy WOULD end our depression. Man could do literally ANYTHING, level mountains, fill in oceans, drain, irrigate, develop everything, abolish deserts, that are the earth's cancers. It could not, however, abolish human greed, the desire to have too much. Only time and education can do that.

Horseshoe Curve Road to Be Dedicated

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Winding around the picturesque and famous Horseshoe Curve, a hard-surface highway will be officially opened Thursday with Altoona leaders participating.

Representatives of the Altoona Chamber of Commerce, Blair County Motor Club and the Altoona Booster Association will head the caravan which leaves Altoona at noon to travel the new road to Gallitzin, 12 miles away.

BONUS CAMPS REVOLT LOOMS

Capt. Hoke Smith, in charge of Camp Sherry, housing 200 veterans here, said they will not join Waters' "Khaki Shirts," semi-military political organization, and that Waters will be dethroned if he insists.

At Johnstown, Mayor Eddie McCloskey for nearly a week has been frantically urging Waters to come there to make clear his stand on various issues. For two weeks, McCloskey says, Waters has failed to communicate with the encampment.

Things You Never Knew Till Now About Famous Hosts and Their Music

Henry Ford will not permit the orchestras in his home to play anything but old-fashioned jigs and barn dance music. . . . When he entertained the Prince of Wales, the three orchestras alternated from one antiquated tune to another until the Prince was prompted to ask an intimate if someone was playing a joke on him. . . . "It's very Russian, isn't it?" he remarked.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the most democratic of all famous hosts. . . . Once he has hired his orchestra, he makes no suggestions and leaves all the details in the hands of the leader. . . . As a result, the music at his parties is always superb. . . . There is less drinking at the Rockefeller affairs than at any of the others in society.

Mrs. James B. Duke, wife of the tobacco magnate, has a spectacular way of breaking up her parties. . . . Just before dawn, the musicians walk out toward the gates playing as they go while the guests follow them in a long snake dance. . . . No one is permitted back in the house.

Calvin Coolidge at intimate parties sometimes gives excellent imitations of railroad whistles and the screeching brakes of trains on a small harmonica. . . . Mr. Coolidge has had the same harmonica for 30 years and keeps it in a special deposit box in his home.

Mussolini will neither dance nor applaud an orchestra unless it plays the soft melodies of the waltz. . . . Musicians coming to his home understand this and have never been known to offend his tastes. . . . Several years ago the Duce visited the Lido in Venice when Meyer Davis was leading the orchestra. . . . The American leader struck up an Italian martial score in his honor, but Mussolini sent word from his table to change it to a Viennese waltz.

Edward T. Stotesbury, the Philly social leader, is fond of gay parties and modern dance rhythms. . . . He was a drummer in the Civil War and usually does a turn for his guests with the sticks.

Andrew Mellon always insists on two orchestras—one the regulation band with brass, the other a string ensemble to furnish the softer music every third dance. . . . The American Ambassador to England seldom remains through one of his own parties. . . . After greeting his most important guests, he slips away to bed.

Poor Smith Reynolds liked the "St. Louis Blues" type of music. . . . The hotter the orchestration, the more pleased he was. . . . He frequently employed orchestras to repeat one favorite number for him for an entire evening.

Edward Windsor, Prince of Wales, enjoys huge gatherings of friends. . . . He prefers gay and boisterous music, and often during a party he'll replace the drummer. . . . Although he is a tenth rate manipulator of the drum-sticks, his sense of rhythm is perfect. . . . The reason he likes loud and swift orchestrations is "because it's real and living. Soft music is obsequious and I've had too much of that business."

A. Atwater Kent, the radio mogul, used 90-piece orchestras at his house parties, probably the largest ever assembled for private purposes.

The late Col. duPont frequently halted the music in the middle of a dance, called all his guests into a corner of the ball room, withdrew a pack of playing cards from his evening suit, and performed almost unbelievably difficult tricks.

Owen D. Young will walk a hundred miles to listen to a quartet, and once did. . . . The first order he issues, when music is being arranged for one of his affairs, is that a quartet must be included. . . . He keeps them singing till late hours and often joins in the vocalizing. . . . His friends are not so hot for the quintets.

Alice Longworth's parties exude real Continental glamour . . . They are swiftly paced, invariably joyous and always last until dawn. . . . Brassy, Negro music is predominant, but the acoustics of her home are so arranged as to endow it with a softness that is strange to the Harlem cacophony. . . . You will always want to be invited again.

The late Nicholas Longworth entertained his visitors with violin solos. . . . He was a pupil of Leopold Auer and played nothing but classical music.

Clarence Mackay entertains more royalty than any other American. . . . He abhors the raucous type of music, preferring harp and violin solos. . . . The only deviation he ever made from this was when the Prince of Wales was his guest. . . . For this occasion, he personally accompanied a musical agent to Harlem to select the best band available at the time.

Ralph Beaver Strassburger, the Pennsylvania publisher, insists on absolutely new chunes at his warmings. . . . Usually he has one or two especially composed for the occasion. . . . Of course, orchestras cost him a great deal more than the average. . . . At the Ritz-Carlton recently, his music bill was $10,000 . . . . The orchestra leader had it photostated and framed.

Warren G. Harding's favorite piece was "La Paloma" . . . And Washington society used that number almost as its theme song during his occupancy of the White House.

Henry O. Havemeyer, the sugar king, gives parties at which all the music comes from harmoniums (miniature organs).

Contrary to popular belief, Otto Kahn does not like crowds. . . . He may never miss an opening or an important society event, but when he gives parties, they are always intimate . . . He usually learns what kind of music pleases his guests most and orders it accordingly.

Edward McLean, the Washington and Cincinnati publisher, is fond of singular musical combinations . . . His favorite diversion is having the orchestra split up and play four different songs at the same time.

Sylvia Sidney Wanted for Lead

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16.

The canceling of "Madame Butterfly" will not add much to Sylvia Sidney's vacation. Paramount wants her for the leading role in "All My Love," another story of a small town girl who makes a name for herself in the city.

While there is no starting date on the picture as yet, Sidney Buchman is doing a rush job on the script. He is the writer who recently adapted "The Sign of the Cross" for Cecil B. De Mille.

Sylvia Sidney

Meanwhile Sylvia is entertaining her parents, who are out here on a visit. Last Monday was this star's birthday. Among her presents were a set of silver service plates, a thoroughbred Doberman pincer dog (gift of a Detroit fan), a string of jade, twin canaries and a diamond wrist watch.

There seems to be no truth, at present, in the rumor that Sylvia will become a star in the new B. P. Schulberg production venture.

BOULEVARD CHATTER

With all the praise he has received for acting, Lionel Barrymore is most elated over the sell-out of six etchings which he put on exhibit here last week. The star spends all his spare hours working in his penthouse studio at M. G. M. . . . It was amusing, the incident of that polite usher who kept pointing out film celebrities to Joseph M. Schenck at the Olympic Stadium . . . Ethel Jackson, widow of Joseph Jackson, has left here for a year in Europe. Before sailing, she will spend a month with Joe's parents in Winchester, Ky. . . . It's a girl at the Eddie Nugents . . . After seeing sunshine only two weeks out of six, Mel Brown writes from Portland that he will be coming back to Hollywood soon. The former R-K-O director has caught tons of salmon . . . Lewis Ayres has joined the Bing Crosby-Nick Stuart fishing expedition to the Gaudeloupe Islands. The trio have chartered a yacht in San Diego and will be sailing any day now.

Jos. M. Schenck

This is another story from the prolific Rian James, who shames all other columnists by turning out daily copy for a Brooklyn paper and dashing off innumerable scenarios between times.

Young Doug is due to start his picture the last of this month, which means that he and Joan Crawford will be returning soon.

Latest

Alligator in Cinema Is A Star

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Real thrills are provided in the Avenue Cinema by a man's wrestling match with an alligator, which he captures alive after a long struggle followed by a hypnotic display that puts the reptile to sleep. There is also a chance to see alligators born as the hunter robs the nests of their eggs. The underwater swimming pictures are the most sensational part of the program, while Ernest Newman takes his travelers to Berlin, where the busy streets are very much like busy streets anywhere and the police dogs have their day as all over the world where there's a calendar.

Mr. Seibel

There is also a German film, after several weeks of French and English pictures. This one is called "Komm zum Rendezvous," which is equivalent to "Meet me at the same old place." It is supposed to take place in Paris, but it looks more like Posen. The song hit, "Do you know the latest game—Sex Appeal?" indicates that this overworked phrase is being smuggled into Germany. If Herr Hitler will shoot all those who use it, along with "smoking" and similar abominations, he ought to be given a chance to make good. The song has a banal tune to make it worse, while the tango hit about "Hearts and Roses" is more of the standardized, stenciled and stereotyped jazz which tickles the soles (not souls) of the Fatherland's eroticised pastry cooks.

"Rendezvous" has a plot—in fact, it has two or three plots—and it has one humorous scene, where the fake music teacher, while a student is waiting in the anteroom, turns on the graphophone and loudly criticises the distinguished tenor he is supposed to be coaching. The rest of the picture is rather sad, with much posturing and grimacing to supply the lack of comedy.

New Pictures Coming

The Enright tomorrow will show "Week-End Marriage," starring Loretta Young and Norman Foster.

The Fulton's screen attraction that will begin a week's run Thursday is "Race Track," with Leo Carrillo in the lead role.

Buster Keaton, frozen-faced comedian, and Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante, are featured in the comedy, "Speak Easily," opening in the Penn, Friday.

"Doctor X," melodrama, with Lionel Atwell, Lee Tracy and Fay Wray in the cast, comes Friday to the Stanley. An all-talking kiddie comedy with Pittsburgh children as the players will also be shown.

Fletcher Henderson For Kennywood

Because of rearranged bookings Don Bestor will not come to Kennywood Friday. Instead the dance music, for one night only, that of the American Legion picnic, will be played by Fletcher Henderson's orchestra. Henderson heads one of the most noted negro musical organizations in America, long featured in New York clubs, a maker of dance records and a popular radio feature.

Five of the seven principal roles of Gloria Swanson's picture, "Perfect Understanding," now being filmed in England, are being played by English actors, most prominent among them being Sir Nigel Playfair, noted actor-manager of London. He has been a stage player for 30 years and heretofore has spurned the movies. Laurence Olivier and John Halliday, English actors in Hollywood, went back to their native land to support Miss Swanson. In the company also are Miss Swanson's husband, Michael Farmer, and Heather Hatcher, London musical comedy star. Besides Miss Swanson, the only American among the principals is Genevieve Tobin, who is well known in London, where she appeared in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," and other stage productions. The company has just completed a month's work on the French Riviera, where regatta and shore resort sequences were made.

Henry Stephenson, prominent stage actor who went to Los Angeles as a member of the company appearing with Philip Merivale in "Cynara," is remaining to play the same part in the film version, which has Ronald Colman as its star. Merivale, who played two weeks in Los Angeles, will be seen in a San Francisco engagement before heading for the East, where he will tour with the same play, which ran from November 2 to May 1 in New York last season.

* * *

Rod La Rocque, star of the silent movies, will make a new bow to Broadway tonight in "Domino," William A. Brady's first production of the new season, a comedy adapted from the French by his wife, Grace George. . . . Among Hollywood comics who will support Al Jolson in "The New Yorker" are Bert Roach, Harry Langdon, Chester Conklin, Roland Young, Victor Potel, Heine Conklin, Vince Barnett and Tammany Young . . . Sixteen girls, picked from 76 selected for Eddie Cantor's coming film, "The Kid From Spain," will tour the country in connection with first-run showings of the picture . . . "Rain," starring Joan Crawford, filmed before she went abroad, will be ready for fall release, with Walter Huston in the role of the missionary; William Gargan as the Marine sergeant and Guy Kibbee as the trader . . . Otis Skinner is said to have a liking for "The Nobel Prize" adapted by Herman Bernstein and Ingrid Smit from the Scandinavian of Hjalmar Bergman, as a vehicle for himself . . . The Chicago company of "Another Language," current New York hit, will make its debut in Albany next Monday, en route to the Windy City, where it will open September 4.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Best of Intentions

I'M NOT really too much of a cynic, but I've always felt a trifle mistrustful of the guy who keeps his wife's picture prominently displayed on his office desk. Ask me why and I can't tell you. All I can say is that, to me, it just doesn't constitute any really great token of affection. It's like advertising love—which is a waste of time because you can neither buy it nor sell it.

Look at Freddy Stone—for instance—or if you don't care to look at him, accept this pen portrait as being an authentic likeness. Darn near the whole of his office staff had remarked, at one time or other, on what a wonderful husband he must be; just because a foot-high, silver-framed photograph of his wife had adorned his desk for nearly 10 years.

"A wonderful husband!"

Fred smiled to himself as he thought it over. It was a wry sort of smile, spoiled partly by the irony of what he was smiling at and partly by a hangover compared with which dyspepsia would have seemed a pleasure.

Ten years ago Freddy had married Doris and everybody who knew them called it an ideal match. It was a case of playboy marrying playgirl and it was a toss-up as to which of the two knew the hot spots of this old town best. With no Winchell to record their peregrinations, the public didn't know so much about them. But to the regular round-the-towners, they were known as the "Good-Time Twins."

They had money to burn and, believe me, they made a bonfire of it. If Freddy pulled a big party, Doris pulled a bigger one. Between them, they invented more ways of raising Cain than all of the more recent Broadway sports rolled into one.

As Freddy sat at his office desk thinking over those past years, he recalled the night before their wedding and the talk he had with Doris.

"Ours is going to be a grand partnership, Doris," Freddy remembered saying. "We're going to build our future on mutual trust; both of us going our own ways, knowing that in the end our ways are bound to meet."

And that's just what happened. For two years, the marriage panned out as they had dreamed—a companionate affair with the saving grace of a marriage license.

Then their child arrived, and Doris forsook the gay round and became engrossed in the bringing up of a daughter. Something fiercely maternal turned her from one extreme to the other, and the play girl de luxe became a mother supreme. Nothing mattered but her home and her child, and Freddy felt a little deserted.

In spite of his real and very genuine love for their kid, Freddy just couldn't stop hankering after the bright lights. Without the moderating influence of Doris he became a ship without a rudder — and Broadway is a devil of a sea to negotiate without some kind of steering. Within a few months, he hit the booze trail with a wallop that broke a world's record in the speakeasy olympics.

Eight years of this. Eight years of horror for Doris who only stopped at divorce for the sake of their child. Eight years of soul-rotting drunkenness with a few lucid intervals during which Freddy managed to conduct his business on something of a remarkable basis. . . .

Freddy sat, lost in thought as he gazed at Doris' portrait. It had projected itself, like a motion picture, in the frame.

"What a swine I've been!"

Freddy uttered his thoughts aloud. And then, with a determination he hadn't known for nearly eight years, he got up out of his seat and vowed the turning over of a new leaf.

A few minutes later he swung out of his office with the jaunty step of a man suddenly freed from jail, and made his way to one of Fifth avenue's most exclusive jewelry stores. He was going to buy Doris a ring—not as a token of a new start.

"Doris," he was going to say as he put it on her finger, "let's get married over again. Let's pretend these last eight years haven't happened. Let's" . . .

* * *

Freddy got home that evening just before dinner. He couldn't remember when he had felt so good and, like an excited schoolboy carrying a surprise gift home for his mother, he crept into the sitting room.

His first instinct was to surprise Doris in her room, but he figured that she would probably have heard him come in. And for Freddy to return home at this hour would be surprise enough in any case.

Waiting for her to come down, Freddy sat examining the ring he had purchased. Suddenly he heard Doris enter the room and, hastily, he put the ring in his pocket. Rising, he turned to greet her.

"Well, Doris, old lady, the prodigal has come home."

"What was that you put in your pocket, Freddy?"

"Why—er—nothing—I mean—mean——" Freddy stammered. The coldness of her voice stunned him.

"Nothing, eh?" Her voice was even colder. Her eyes held a strange glint. "It was a ring, Freddy—and there's no use denying it. I saw you put it into your pocket as I came into the room."

She paused for a fleeting second. Then—

"So it's come to this, has it, Freddy?" she went on. "Drinking I could stand. It's become so much a part of our lives that I don't notice it now. But drink and women, especially when you flaunt rings in my face, form a combination that even I can't put up with."

The man swallowed hard.

"But, Doris, I—I don't understand."

"Oh, don't talk like a child. Whom was the ring for?"

"Why, for you, sweetheart."

The woman laughed. Loudly.

"Please stop lying, Fred. Buying rings for me, are you? And did you expect to hide it guiltily in your pocket the moment I entered the room?"

Fred clenched his fists.

"But darling, Honey. Will you—will you please listen?"

Doris shook her head.

"No, Freddy," was her reply. "I've listened long enough to your excuses. I'm fed up now, and this is the end. Get out, and don't come home again. Go to your other woman and give her the ring. Get out, I say."

And Fred got out. Outside, he looked up at the stars. Then he looked at the ring.

"Oh, well," he muttered, "what's the use? I should have known that Stella or Millie or Gene or Dorothy would have appreciated it more in the first place." . . .

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

Today we have lots of news, all about the most interesting of social events, a wedding. Stella Phillips, young daughter of the Bejamin D. Phillipses, of Butler, is marrying Rolland LeRoy Ehrman, son of the Harry S. Ehrmans, of Butler, this afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Phillips home.

An altar has been arranged before a large window in the center hall of the home, and decorated with white lilies and cibotium ferns.

The bride, whose father is giving her in marriage, is wearing a gown of white French Romaine crepe in the princess mode having white tulle ruching outlining the armholes of a little jacket of the white crepe and the skirt. She is wearing a white crepe turban instead of a veil, and is carrying a Colonial bouquet of white gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Her sisters, Clorinda and Undine, as her only attendants, are wearing similar dresses of chiffon, fashioned with smart capes and long, full skirts, and they are wearing large picture hats and carrying arm bouquets of pick roses and blue delphinium. Clorinda is in blue chiffon, and Undine in pink.

The mother of the bride is wearing Maize velvet lace with a brown velvet hat and the mother of the bridegroom is in blue and white.

Serving as best man is Wendell Campbell, brother of the bridegroom, and Benjamin Dwight Phillips, Jr., brother of the bride, is also a member of the bridal party.

Wedding Guests

The only guests in addition to the immediate families are Mrs. Grace Phillips Johnson, of New Castle, and T. W. Phillips, Jr., of Butler.

SHIRRINGS AND DEEP GATHERS APPEAR IN NEW EVENING FROCKS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 16. — Shirrings, tight little ruffles, and deep gathers are much in evidence this season. They appear, without stint, on many new evening frocks. Dressmakers choose soft sheer material for the especial purpose of using many gathers and frills without adding much to one's bulk.

* * *

CHIFFON, georgette and other related materials which lend themselves to this sort of treatment, are great favorites right now. They are seen less often in plain colors than in prints, but the prints in favor are seldom the customary flower and leaf designs. Tiny dots, immense coin dots, plaids and checks are among the popular patterns.

* * *

MIRANDE'S dotted dress is a fashionable example of the type of evening dress seen frequently in Paris this summer. In white, with immense dots of deep gray, it is often seen with a flower-like ornament of starched chiffon in deep red or some other rich color.

* * *

* * *

Sir Hubert Wilkins Speaks With 'Headline Hunter' On WCAE Tonight

Sir Hubert Wilkins, the noted explorer, who failed in his attempt to reach the North Pole in a submarine last year, and Floyd Gibbons, noted international headline hunter, come to the NBC microphone to speak over a coast-to-coast network, including WCAE, tonight at 9 o'clock as guests on the National Artists Series program. Sir Hubert gives a brief talk on plans for his second attempt at an underseas polar dash. Gibbons is heard in other of his rapid-fire analyses based on his observations as a newspaper correspondent in the Orient during the Sino-Japanese conflict. An excerpt from George Frame Brown's "Thompkins Corners," and music by the NBC Concert Orchestra, directed by Ceasare Sodero, also are included on the program.

Sir Hubert

Four dramatizations are scheduled on Pittsburgh stations tonight. "The Mail Truck Murder," depicting the story of how three highway robbers ruthlessly shot to death the driver and guard of a government mail truck in New Jersey and escaped with more than $300,000 in federal notes, is presented during the dance hour on WCAE at 10.

"Thunder-Death," a stirring drama about a white man who violated the beliefs and codes of the natives in the South Sea Islands, is heard on KDKA at 8. On the same station at 6:30, the life story of Thomas Carlyle is portrayed during the "Sheer Romance" program, sent over an NBC network from the Pittsburgh studios. "The Yellow Arrow Murders" is the Crime Club presentation on WJAS at 9:30.

Three, possibly four, members of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who are in Pittsburgh for games with the Pirates, including Dazzy Vance, are brought to the KQV microphone by Terry McGough tonight at 7:30.

Welcome Lewis has all the stories of Scotland Yard which are published only in England sent to her each month by a London bookseller.

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

BY SALLY MARTIN

Spying on Husband Won't Keep Him From Straying

Will husbands go haywire unless they're watched?

The calamity howlers are telling Janetta that they will, and she should. Janetta doesn't believe them—yet. She still trusts her husband; still thinks he has a right to seek a little amusement by himself, or with the other boys, even though he is married.

But the calamity howlers whisper that there is more to these "amusements" than Janetta suspects, and so she's beginning to wonder, beginning to fear.

However, before she does anything drastic, she wants a little advice.

WANTS ADVICE

Can you give her some? Do you believe that all men are "on the make" for some peppy, platinum blonde as soon as they get away from home?

Or do you believe that there are decent husbands, as well as decent wives.

"Dear Sally:

"Will you please advise me? I can't make up my mind what would be best for me to do.

"I have been married 14 years, and am very happy. My husband has to go out of town once in a while. The company sometimes sends two or three men out. Now if he is out of town, he goes out, and it is true he spends much more money than when he is at home.

"But I don't care about that. If he is in town, he goes out three times a week. He likes to see a wrestling match, a prize fight, or to play cards.

HUSBAND LYING

"He never goes to shows. I like shows, so he takes me and our little girl there, and then goes on to play cards and have a good time with his men friends. He is no gambler. He often asks me to come along, but I don't go, because I wouldn't enjoy myself. I would rather see a good show or read a book. There is never any argument about it. We each do as we like.

"But I know three married men, and they try so hard to tell me that if a husband is out of town for two or three weeks, and goes out as my husband does, he has another woman, and if he comes home and tells his wife he hasn't, he is a liar.

"If I try to tell them I know better—that there is no other woman—they just laugh and look at me like I am a little dumb girl from the farm.

"I don't know what to think. I've always trusted my husband, and I don't see why a man should make a slave of himself because he is married. He still has a right to be himself, and enjoy the things he likes. He earns the money and takes care of his family, and I think he can spend some of his money and enjoy himself.

"Why do people think that as soon as a man goes out without his wife he must have another woman.

"I have a funny feeling about it, and would like to know if I should change my mind and go out with my husband every time he goes, just to watch him. I am not very strong, and I know I would soon be bored and tired of it. What do you think?

"JANETTA."

ON RIGHT TRACK

Should you throw your trust and understanding overboard, and take to spying?

Never! You're on the right track now. Stay there. Your husband has a right to enjoy himself. And there is no reason on earth to suspect that he is disloyal because he does it.

Then why do these men try so hard to convince you that he is? Probably because they are judging the world by themselves, my dear! That is one of the oldest and pestiest habits that we humans have.

A man who is a rotter himself wants to believe that all other men are. It salves his conscience, if he can prove that other people are just as crooked as he is. Maybe that is why these gents are working on you. Maybe, too, they're only kidding you because they can get a rise out of you that way. But whatever it is, don't believe them, or let them worry you, and wreck that fine confidence you have founded your happiness on.

Keep on treating your husband like a responsible human being. There is no better way on earth to keep him acting like one. And even if he weren't—even if he felt like straying—spying on him wouldn't keep him from it.

Fay King Cautions Individuals Against Low Tides of Spirit

By FAY KING

There are times when, for no reason at all, we are in the high tide of good spirits.

The least social engagement is a delightful event. Any household task is inspired and accomplished in no time. Nothing annoying in the office routine can upset us in the least.

But we also experience, for no reason, those low tides of spirit, when a brilliant engagement can be a bore, household duties seem drudgery and the office routine a dull grind.

Let silence and quiet be your safe harbor at such times, to wait like a ship for the return of high tide, for you will come to disaster, as it would, if you attempt to plow ahead at the same speed in a low tide of spirit.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Don't Overtax Your Heart! It Has Heavy Work.

Heart disease continues to be one of the leading causes of disability in middle age. Many cases of heart disease could have been prevented if proper precautions had been taken. Too often the sufferer goes to a physician too late, when little help can be given.

Dr. Copeland

The heart pumps blood through the body. By this action the blood, rich in oxygen from the lungs and nutritive elements from the food, is distributed to the organs and tissues of the body. This means that the heart has to do a great deal of work.

The heart is made up of many muscles and if these are weakened, either as a result of infection or disease, their efficiency is decreased and less work should be demanded of the heart.

It is here that a great mistake is made. Few realize that the heart, like any other muscle in the body, requires rest when fatigued. If the heart muscle is allowed to rest and is given proper care, it becomes refreshed and strengthened, able to resume the normal demands made upon it.

Excessive calls for work must never be placed upon a damaged and diseased heart. Severe and exerting labor must be avoided. Enough hours of sleep and sufficient rest are imperative. It is often advisable to take an afternoon nap, and not to depend on regular hours in bed for the needed heart rest.

Violent exercise is a common cause of heart disease. It is dangerous even for a normal heart, and suicidal for one who has a damaged heart.

Overweight is another common and neglected cause for heart disease. Carelessness in eating, especially overeating, leads to heart trouble. Chronic indigestion, constipation, infected teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gallbladder and other diseased organs are contributory factors in producing heart disease.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of rest. In advanced cases of heart disease it may be necessary to have periods of complete rest for days, or even weeks. This is the only way to permit the heart to recuperate.

I know many persons who take one or two hours of rest in the middle of the day. They are sensible. They realize their weakness and know that rest is the only way to prevent heart failure. It is only a foolish man who whips his tired horse homeward bound.

Please bear in mind that heart disease does not mean shortened life; but it does mean that your expectation of life is determined by the care and respect you give your heart.

Answers to Health Queries

A.—The patient cannot be entirely cured, but with proper treatment, diet and general care, the condition can be greatly improved. The patient must rest a great deal and avoid excitement, especially mental upset, worry and fatigue.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Out-Guessing the Opponents

One of the thrills of bidding a hand at Contract Bridge is laying a trap for your opponents and seeing them fall into it. There is, however, in the use of artificial bids and "trap" responses to artificial bids the element of danger that you and your partner may be the ones to fall into the pit so carefully dug for your adversaries, and left to bemoan a clever plan gone wrong.

Recently two leading Contract teams-of-four played a match in an eastern city. At one table, the players sitting North and South were using the "Vanderbilt Club," an invention of Mr. Harold S. Vanderbilt, to show a hand containing more than 3 honor-tricks and requiring a response from partner. The artificial response to this artificial club bid to show a weak hand is a bid of one diamond. This is a Forcing bid, which the Opening bidder may not pass, although he is not required to keep the bidding open until game is reached.

With this explanation, it is interesting to study the hand below:

North—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A 2 ♡ J 6 2 ◇ A K 10 5 4 ♣ Q 10 2
♠ Q 9 8 5 ♡ 3 ◇ 9 8 3 ♣ K J 8 6 3	North / West East / South	♠ J 10 4 ♡ K 9 7 4 ◇ 7 6 ♣ A 9 7 5
	♠ K 7 6 3 ♡ A Q 10 8 5 ◇ Q J 2 ♣ 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1♣(1)	Pass
1◇(2)	Pass	Pass(3)	Pass

(1) The hand contained 3½ honor-tricks and therefore qualified as an artificial one club bid for users of this convention.

(2) An incorrect response, but not a slip of the tongue. South, one of the great Contract strategists of the country, planned to trap his East and West opponents either into bidding against two strong hands or to induce them to double a makeable contract. The strategic conception was very fine, as the team represented by this North and South pair were many hundred points behind.

(3) Also a strategic pass. North, of course, knew that he could not pass his partner's response to his artificial Opening bid. However, thinking that East might be tempted to make some bid in view of his partner's failure to give a strength response, North waited for his opponents.

In the play, South made his bid of one diamond and two over-tricks as well. The hand, of course, would have produced game at notrump or at hearts, easily reachable in the bidding, had it not been for the sweeping strategic plans of the North and South pair, which, alas, failed to take into account the fact that their opponents were very good Bridge players.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

East bids one club, South bids two hearts, and West passes. What should North bid, holding:

♠ 4 3 ♡ 7 5 ◇ A 6 ♣ Q 8 7 5 4 3

Answer: Two notrump. The two heart Overcall by South has indicated a very strong playing hand, with either a strong two-suitor or a powerful single suit, and North, holding a stop in the opponents' suit and a side Ace, should give South the opportunity to make another bid.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engagement Party.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Your column is always of great interest to me and I especially admire the charming and friendly way that you advise your correspondents.

1. Recently we received an invitation to an engagement reception. We decided to attend and had some flowers sent to the young lady's home beforehand. Is an engagement party a customary part of pre-nuptial affairs? This was my first experience and I have never noticed any reference in your column to such a party. (However, I might have missed it.)

2. Is it correct to give baby showers for arrivals after the first child? I have attended showers for the first blessed event, but somehow the second and so forth never seem to rate the same attention. This is understandable, but leaves one wondering about the "correct procedure." M. D."

Thank you!

1. You did just the right thing . . . to send flowers as a friendly gesture of felicitations, and to send them before the party.

While it is not at all necessary to have engagement parties to celebrate the engagement, usually there is at least one of these festive events, and often there are many.

2. There aren't any rules about the "correct procedure" for showers, and we must determine for each one what we consider good taste and discrimination, and abide by that. Certainly the first babies do seem to "rate" more attention in practically every way than the "successors."

A Chain Is As Strong As Its Weakest Link

This group of grocers is by no means a "Chain." But we have a chain of evidence in our favor that is rapidly making these the most popular stores in town. And rightly, for there is not a single weak link in that chain. Every link works definitely to your advantage, bringing you better groceries, better prices and better marketing conditions. Consider—our lower overhead, the longer employment record of our clerks, our fairer merchandising methods, better weights and measures. These are advantages you can use in every-day practice—advantages you can get in no other way. Many women have proved to themselves that this is the efficient, economical and satisfactory way to shop—we'd like to have you find it out also. COAL INDUSTRY FACES LAKE RATE WAR

Three Carriers Block Attempt to Uphold Differential

Coal dealers and operators in the Pittsburgh district and Pennsylvania today were facing freight rate opposition on two different fronts, outcome of which conflicts will greatly affect the coal industry of the state.

An attempt by the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad to maintain the 10 cent differential between freight rates in Pennsylvania and Ohio mining districts on coal shipments to Great Lake ports was reported being blocked by the Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroads.

BUREAU INTERVENES

The Interestate Commerce Commission yesterday permitted the Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau of Pittsburgh to intervene in proceedings on a complaint by operators in Kentucky seeking a rate as low as the existing Pittsburgh figure.

The Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad today announced it had reduced its rate on coal from the Pittsburgh district to Ohio lake ports from $1.84 a ton to $1.55, to meet the new low rate of $1.45 a ton, a reduction from $1.74, established August 1, by the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad, which affected only operators in the Eastern Ohio district. The P. & W. Va.'s new rate schedule, effective September 9, has been filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Opposing this new schedule, the P. R. R., B. & O., and P. & L. E. are reported to have filed a protest with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

CONCESSION MADE

It is pointed out by exponents of the new rate that these railroads, while opposing a reduction in the Pittsburgh district, have agreed to apply to Ohio operators the new low rate set by the Wheeling and Lake Erie.

The complaint registered by the Kentucky coal operators hinges on their belief that they should be given the same rate as the Pittsburgh district for commercial coal shipments to industrial points not served by lake shipments, according to officials of the Coal Traffic Bureau.

The Interstate Commerce Commission by its action yesterday has given the traffic body, representing bituminous operators in the Pittsburgh, Connellsville and Freeport fields, authority to hear testimony by the southern interests and to determine whether their shipments would affect the Pennsylvania industry.

LEGION CHIEFS OPEN SESSIONS TOMORROW

Executive Board to Meet; Many Social Events Planned

Preconvention sessions of the Pennsylvania Department, American Legion, which opens its anual three-day conclave Thursday, are scheduled tomorrow. The 15,000 official Legion and auxiliary delegates begin arriving then to give a wartime appearance to the city's flag-bedecked streets.

While the first official Legion meeting will be the State Executive Commitee session tomorrow night in the William Penn Hotel, the auxiliary and the "8 and 40." auxiliary of the "40 and 8." will stage activities throughout the day.

Social events will predominate on the programs. The auxiliary schedule includes a tea given by Mrs. Thomas Meany, Jr., department president, in the Women's City Club Rooms of the hotel at 3 o'clock. The local committee will entertain department officers at a 6 o'clock dinner in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. A delegates' reception at 9:30 o'clock is a feature at the Fort Pitt Hotel and will be followed by a dance.

CAMPAIGN FOR VOTES

As the "8 and 40" registration opens at the Fort Pitt and an executive session will be held in Moose Temple. Following a luncheon at the H. J. Heinz plant, a business session will occupy the afternoon. A dinner will precede the annual "wreck" or initiation, while a dance at the William Penn Hotel will close the day's activities.

Convention problems and activities will be completed at the night executive committee meeting in final preparation to entertain visitors, expected to number between 50,000 and 60,000 for Saturday's six-hour parade. State Commander George J. Proesl, of DuBois, will preside.

Political campaigning already has started among early arrivals. The main fight is expected to center about the post of national committeeman, now held by Charles A. Gebert, of Tamaqua. He is expected to seek re-election and a canvass of Allegheny County delegates indicates their support. Philadelphia's delegation, headed by Eastern Vice-Commander Frank A. Kanter, of Philadelphia, is campaigning for Vincent A. Carroll, past national vice-commander.

GRIFFITH UNOPPOSED

Paul Griffith, of Uniontown, western vice-commander, so far is unopposed in his candidacy for state commander. Local support is indicated in his favor. It is reported Proesl might seek the national committeeeman post, but he had not announced his condidacy.

Gen. Smedley D. Butler has notified headquarters he will attend Saturday's session.

Colorful uniforms will add to the spectacle of the state drum and bugle corps competition Friday evening at Forbes Field. Thirteen Class A and 19 Class B corps will participate, including the title holders of the state. The competition and drills, many corps featuring music written by their own members, is expected to last six hours. During Friday afternoon, a picnic for Legionnaires and their families will be held at Kennywood Park. Feature stunts are being arranged.

Jelly Fish Infest Pool At Swissvale Plant

THE TINY CRASPEDACUSTA

Biologists Puzzled by Mysterious Invasion Of 'Cartwheels'

Tiny fresh-water jelly fish have mysteriously made their appearance by the millions in a pool on the Union Switch and Signal grounds at Swissvale.

The fish are white and look like midget watch wheels. Because of their color and size it is impossible to photograph them. Workers at the plant call them "cartwheels."

When the noon whistle blows at the Switch and Signal plant, the workers flock to the interesting aquarium near the repair shop. Many have taken the jelly fish home.

Biologists at Pitt and the Carnegie Museum are giving them a special study. Dr. Stanley T. Brooks, member of the museum staff, and an authority on fish of this kind, is planning to visit the pool this week.

C. G. Harwig, who is in charge of the estimating department at the Switch and Signal said:

"The name for the fish is craspedacusta. How they got here nobody knows. The only other place where they have been found is in Kentucky."

HEIR'S TORTURE TOLD IN COURT

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—A story stranger than fiction was being unfolded here today to a jury of eight women and four men at a trial to determine the sanity of Allan Bradford Monks, 57-year-old heir to a large Boston fortune.

Testimony revealed that Monks, once an engineer and explorer, an international chess player and a man of affairs, has, in recent years, been kept a virtual prisoner. One witness declared that on one occasion she had seen Monks beaten and roped to a bed by a Japanese guard.

The state's star witness, however, was a silent one—Monks himself.

Apparently unable to understand, Monks had to be carried to the stand and when Deputy District Attorney Holt questioned him there was no response. Monks sat in the witness chair.

Atty. Lindsay Looms as Swearingen Successor

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 16.—According to reports about Harrisburg, the resignation of Judge Joseph M. Swearingen from Common Pleas bench of Allegheny County is expected at the beginning of the fall term of court. The scramble to name his successor is actively on, and has been for some months.

Mr. Shields

Judge Swearingen, through illness, has been incapacitated for nearly a year of court work. Fairness to the veteran jurist requires the explanation that he has not only been willing, but anxious to retire officially for some time, that a more vigorous man might come to the assistance of his fellow judges, and obviate the necessity of calling in so many jurists from other counties.

Until now he has been dissuaded by friends on and off the bench who were concerned about the appointment Gov. Pinchot would make to fill the vacancy. Naturally the Governor can not, ante-dating a resignation, give intimation of an appointment.

* * *

Three Candidates Lead For Place on Bench

But out of a number of aspirants, or candidates, have emerged three names, Attorneys Alexander P. Lindsay, Garfield Huston and O. K. Eaton. The legal attainments of each are generally approved by the bar and any one of the three, it is assumed, would be acceptable to the remainder of Common Pleas Court.

Political considerations are inevitable in any such appointment despite the glamorous belief we like to hold that politics should not impinge upon the bench. It does, both in appointments and elections.

Eaton has been associated with the Independent movement upon occasion when it required representation in the courts. He has appeared as attorney for labor, notably the miners, in important cases. Despite this, it is not considered now he has the inside track for appointment, though it is known his ability is recognized by Attorney General William A. Schnader.

Houston has a legalistic mind, and is reported to have the approval of President Judge James H. Macfarlane. The recommendation of Judge Macfarlane, however, probably would be more a liability than an asset before Gov. Pinchot and his Independent representatives in Allegheny County.

Lindsay has been in the forefront of the Independent movement since the famous judicial campaign of 1927, when Judges James H. Gray and Frank P. Patterson and the late Richard W. Martin broke the organization slate. Lindsay personally managed the campaign of Gray and dovetailed it with that of Martin. Their activities were beneficial to Patterson, who had some assistance from the Leslie wing of the organization.

* * *

Lindsay for Brown, But Independent

It is true Lindsay was for Francis Shunk Brown in the primary of the gubernatorial campaign of 1930 and made one speech for the Philadelphian. But it also is true that he abided by the primary result and that the groundwork he had laid in the Gray campaign was furnished to the Independents and was used by them to advantage in the last county primary when the courthouse organization was smashed.

It was also used in the last senatorial primary when Pinchot actively backed Gen. Smedley Butler, though Lindsay took no part in that campaign.

Gov. Pinchot, it is known, does not hold that simply because a lawyer of ability opposed him in the 1930 primary he should be eliminated from consideration for a judicial appointment. It is a fact that the majority of the legal profession, the more able element, opposed the Governor, though there were some extremely worthwhile attorneys in his corner.

The influence of Judge Gray is as strong with the Governor as it ever was and Gray always was militant in Pinchot's behalf. He even made speeches for him in 1930, doing openly and courageously the opposite of what some jurists and attorneys, with holier-than-thou attitude, publicly deprecated and privately worked overtime upon.

* * *

McGovern Continues Pinchot Leader

There is also to be considered the influence of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern. He has been and definitely remains, the Pinchot leader in the county. Stories that he has been supplanted are without foundation. He has delegated some routine work to other hands, but McGovern is the final word.

Both McGovern and Gray are reported to favor Lindsay, though Gray because of his position has as yet taken no open stand.

Another thing favoring Lindsay is the vote getting ability he demonstrated in the last judicial campaign. He was defeated, but he made a surprisingly good fight and has gained strength since. Mr. Pinchot it is shown by precedent, is interested in naming judges who can be elected, all other things being equal.

As matters stand today, Attorney Lindsay probably is nearest an appointment, a consummation which would not be a bad thing for Common Pleas Court bench. He combines an appreciable human side with his knowledge of the law.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

You can always depend on the real old American Negro to say the apt things in a few words. Up here at the ranch the other day a Negro private of the famous Tenth Cavalry (who are taking care of the American horses) was leading a tired horse around that had lost in his particular competition. He didn't know anyone was in hearing distance, but we heard him say, "Never mind, old boy, you didn't win nothing but I loves you." Now let some educated diplomat think of a more fitting thing to say to our foreign and native competitors than that. Never mind what boy or girl, from what state or what country, come and was defeated, "We love's you."

Yours, WILL.

Will Rogers

BOARD DEBATES TAX SEPARATION

Whether the County Commissioners are going to permit separation of poll taxes from property taxes will be decided in a few days. At yesterday's commissioners' meeting Commissioners Charles C. McGovern and W. D. Mansfield opposed the idea. McGovern said:

"There should be some provision in cases where a man cannot pay his property taxes that he should be allowed to pay the poll tax. But if we make a blanket order, no property owner would pay the poll tax and thousands of dollars of revenue would be lost."

Mansfield said:

"I would be against any action that might mean that no property owners would pay his poll tax."

Commissioner C. M. Barr said:

"Some provision should be made in cases where people cannot pay their property tax."

30 DEAD FOUND IN GALE RUINS

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 16.—With 30 bodies already recovered from the shapeless ruins that were Freeport, Angleton and West Columbia before a tropical hurricane roared out of the gulf Saturday night and lashed the Texas coast, rescue crews today turned their efforts to caring for the hundreds of homeless and injured.

More than 300 are being treated for injuries suffered when the 72-mile an hour wind struck the coast. Many of the victims are suffering from severe back injuries caused by falling timbers.

A relief train is en route to Freeport with doctors, nurses and medical supplies. A Red Cross observer in the storm-swept area said there was danger of a typhoid epidemic.

Property damage will exceed $1,000,000, and damage to the rice and cotton crops will run into the millions, according to Department of Agriculture experts.

A yacht carrying 11 prominent Houston businessmen was sighted aground near Hoskins Mound, in the Gulf, yesterday. The party signaled to an aviator that they were unharmed by the storm.

After an afternoon of recreation, delegates will tonight attend the grand diamond medal contest for young prohibition orators. The contest has been arranged by Mrs. Myra Miller-Stakffer, of Manheim, Pa.

The committee on political action will meet today and is expected to report tomorrow. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president, has made it plain informally that the convention will not support either the Republican or Democratic party. A decision as to what the W. C. T. U. will do in the campaign probably will be reached tomorrow.

The depression has made more readers, according to the semi-annual report of the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, issued today. During the first half of 1932, 2,199,000 books were loaned, an increase of nearly 50 per cent over the corresponding period of 1929.

WILDWOOD FIRE RAZES CHURCH

A volunteer fireman was injured fighting a spectacular blaze which destroyed the Wildwood Presbyterian Church in the Butler road, between Wildwood and Allison Park, shortly before last midnight and imperiled a nearby parsonage. Damage was estimated at $25,000.

Henry Blackburn, Allison Park volunteer, was cut by flying glass.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, started in the basement of the church and swept throughout the building.

Fire companies from Etna, Undercliffe, Cherry City, Sharp Hill, Valencia, Hampton Township, Elfinwild, Ingomar and Allison Park fought the blaze, but their efforts were futile.

Furniture was carried from the parsonage when it was threatened by the flames. The building was slightly damaged. The Rev. George O. Remensnyder, pastor, and his wife, are away on a vacation.

'HITCH-HIKING' GUNMAN ROBS COLLECTOR

Ex-Convict and Pal Captured, Auto Hoax Thief Escapes

Two men, one said to be an ex-convict, captured last night after they were alleged to have held up a man in Dasher street, were being held in North Side Police Station today.

They told police they were Edward Welsh, 28, Carr Hotel, in lower Penn avenue, and Francis Waverek, 23, of 105 Jacksonia street. They were captured by Charles Snyder, a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad detective, shortly after they are alleged to have held up Felix Tkachik, 48, of Forbes street.

IDENTIFIES SUSPECTS

Tkachik was said by police to have identified the men as the pair who pointed a revolver at him and searched his pockets. He had no money.

A loaded revolver was found in Welsh's possession and Waverek admitted he was an ex-convict, according to police. Waverek told police, they said, he served an 18-month term in Western Penitentiary and was released from the workhouse in Cleveland July 7 after serving a 30-day sentence there.

HIKING GUNMAN

A middle-aged man who, after "thumbing" a ride from G. W. Johnson, of 509 Forest avenue, Bellevue, last night robbed him of $300 in Riverview Park, was being sought by police today.

Johnson, collector for the William Edwardson Company, wholesale grocers, of Cleveland, told police he picked up the man after the stranger asked for a lift. When they had driven a short distance the man pointed a revolver at Johnson, stole the cash which comprised the firm's collections and escaped on foot.

GAVE 13 CARS, ASKS DIVORCE

Charles Goubeaud, 51, of Franklin Township, gave his wife 13 automobiles during their married life, but he did not know how to drive, he testified in Common Pleas Court before Judge George V. Moore, who granted him a divorce from Margaret Goubeaud, 13 years his junior.

He said he often slept in the garage because of her treatment, which included giving him black eyes, striking him with a poker, throwing water glasses, coffee pot, shoes, boxes and once cutting his ear with a butcher knife. Mrs. Goubeaud said she paid part of the cost of the cars. They were married in November, 1915, and parted last August.

Feathers in Pot Recall Chickens That Got Away

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Looks like the drys have indorsed Mr. Hoover because of his story book stand in the beer pond.

He has one foot in the beer and one under his wing.

The drys have always admired a candidate who couldn't make up his mind. The G. O. P. resubmission plank is a lot of window shopping.

Jack Frost never painted a prettier picture on a pane of glass. No more ardent love letter was ever written in the sand. A promise is a promise and we still have the feathers in the pot as a memento of the two chickens that got away.

The drys will help the Republican candidate like a wrinkle in the saddle blanket helps a hoss. They'll be his lead shoes if he wants to sink to the bottom and never come up. Like Sinbad's unwelcome jockey they'll be passenger and freight at the same time.

Alaskan Totem Pole Donated to Zoo

Highland Park zoo, already a wild spot abounding in plenty of animal life, is going to be a little wilder.

An original Alaskan Indian totem pole was being erected in front of the zoo today. The pole is 30 feet high and was brought from Alaska. It is the annual gift of Leo Lehman to the city of Pittsburgh in behalf of the May Stern Company.

The pole is legendary and is known as "Chief Shakes Totem." It has several ravens carved on it and at the bottom has an Indian Atlas. It was secured by the Hudson Bay Company.

TUNNEL EXPERT CHALLENGED BY ENGINEER

Ole Singstaad, who appeared before the commissioners several weeks ago as the chief engineer of the Holland Tunnels, New York, is not known in tunnel building circles here.

John B. Sweeney, chief engineer for Booth and Flinn, Ltd., who built the tunnels under supervision of Clifford Holland, appeared before the County Commissioners yesterday and was authorized to submit his proposal for a study of the feasibility of the Wabash Railroad Bridge and tunnel as a traffic artery. Sweeney was also chief engineer on the Liberty Tubes here.

Asked by Commissioner Charles C. McGovern about Ole Singstaad, Sweeney said:

"I never heard of him. Clifford Holland was the man on the job, and when he died the chief engineer was a man named Freeman. This man Singstaad might have been one of his assistants."

Singstaad made a preliminary survey of the Wabash project as well as the Liberty tubes several weeks ago.

MOTHERS SAIL TOMORROW

The last two of the eight Gold Star mothers from Allegheny County selected by the War Department for the pilgrimage to American cemeteries in France this year, will sail tomorrow on the President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Mary McCartney, 60, of 989 Chartiers street, Carnegie, will visit the grave of her son, Anthony Raymond, killed in action at the age of 26 on September 28, 1918, and buried in the Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery. He was killed two weeks after the death of his father, the late P. J. McCartney. He was in the first contingent of selectives which left Carnegie for Camp Lee in September, 1917. Mrs. McCartney will be accompanied by her daughter, Nellie.

Mrs. Mary Gall, 53, of 319 Olivia street, McKees Rocks, will sail on the same ship to visit the grave of her son, Michael Gall, in Suresnes American Cemetery. Michael enlisted at the age of 18, while attending Curtin School, as a private in Company L, 110th Infantry. 'Weak-Kneed Juries' Blamed for Crime

HARLAN, Ky., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The high rate of law violation in Harlan County, center of Kentucky's coal mine area, is blamed by Circuit Judge D. C. Jones on "weak-kneed juries."

Judge Jones told the grand jury, as he scanned a docket containing 300 cases, 19 of them charging murder:

"Put the fear of God in criminals of Harlan County."

COUNTY TO CUT GARAGE RENT FOR SLEUTHS

The County Commissioners have decreed that county detectives from now on cannot charge rent for keeping their county-owned motors at home in their garage.

On motion of Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, rent will be paid directly to owners of the garages and leases for them will be filed with the commissioners. McGovern, when it was pointed out that some of the county sleuths were billing the county for rent of their own garages, said:

"If they don't want to keep the county car that is furnished them in their own garage without charging rent, let them put them in the county garage and come to work on a street car or train like other employes. They get the cars, the gas and the oil for nothing. They should furnish the garage, if they have one. If they have to pay garage rent, the county should pay it to the owner."

Fifteen World War veterans are displaying on their breasts today the medal of "The Order of the Purple Heart." The badges were presented yesterday at the United States Veterans' Bureau Hospital at Aspinwall under the auspices of the Disabled American Veterans, Aspinwall Chapter, No. 20. "The Purple Heart," first decoration for a "buck private," was instituted by George Washington. It was forgotten after his death, but was revived at his bicentennial this year. It is awarded only to men wounded or gassed in action.

Those receiving it were William A. Jamison, Patsy Costa, Andrew Danko, Samuel Lipschutz, Thomas Hoare, Westley Porter, Dennis Dougherty, John Zarzecny, Joseph P. McGlinchey, Charles Justin Thiebaud, Fred Moore, Felix Kelly, Charles Mrozinski, Owen Wells and Anthony Szablinsky.

The War Department yesterday announced that another Pittsburgher, Capt. Thomas E. Orr, of 316 Parkway drive, Infantry Reserve, had been awarded the "Purple Heart" for wounds received while serving as first lieutenant of a machine gun company, 316th Infantry Regiment.

SALES SWINDLE WARNING GIVEN

The Better Business Bureau of Pittsburgh today warned holders of worthless stock in defunct corporations against a scheme worked in the eastern part of the state whereby ostensible trade-in of such stock on New Jersey real estate turned out to be a binding contract for purchase of realty toward which the stock was only part payment.

Those seeking to sell the real estate are said to offer face value for the stock in the transaction.

STALE GAS IS FEEBLE—FRESH GAS PACKS POWER

WHAT? Such a thing as "stale" gasoline? Absolutely. Think about it a minute and you'll see why.

Gasoline evaporates. The most volatile parts—important "easy starting" elements—slowly float off into thin air. A chemical change occurs, too. So that the longer gas is stored, the more important power elements it loses!—the feebler it gets.

Another thing. When gas is stored too long, sticky compounds form. Those sticky compounds foul your motor—may clog valves and carbureter. And stale gas knocks more, too—particularly on hills.

Those are the reasons why refiners have tried to stop the deterioration of gasoline. Those are the reasons why Gulf is pleased to announce a system that assures you of getting FRESH-MADE gasoline. Here's how...

Gulf makes the best gasoline that can be produced—and takes out certain complex elements which have been found to cause rapid deterioration. Hence, Gulf gas stays FRESH longer.

And Gulf has geared up its distribution system to rush this FRESH-MADE gas to you like some perishable food!

We have placed huge refineries in many sections of the country—so that every Gulf filling station is close to a source of FRESH gasoline. A huge fleet of trucks speeds FRESH gas to Gulf stations every day.

ASPHALT PROBE FORCED BY M'GOVERN

The County Commissioners will investigate the asphalt business at a special meeting Monday. Representatives of various asphalt companies that have furnished and have offered to furnish asphalt to the county will be invited to the conference.

Neither Director F. J. Chester, of the Department of Highways, nor Commissioner C. M. Barr were in favor of holding up the award of asphalt contracts yesterday when Commissioner Charles C. McGovern said:

"We had better have the conference. This is the greatest racket of them all—this asphalt business. I have been trying to get at it for eight years. Let's get them all in and hear them talk about each other."

Barr said that inasmuch as the contracts to be awarded yesterday were for surface treatment, there was no necessity for a conference. Chester said the material was needed at once and yesterday's awards should not be held up.

But McGovern insisted:

"A week's delay won't hurt any on awarding this contract. And I want to find out all I can about the asphalt business."

Chester formerly was local representative for the Barber Asphalt Company, which sold huge quantities of asphalt to the county during the Babcock - Armstrong regime.

The commissioners also rejected, on McGovern's motion, the bids of the Duquesne Slag Company for furnishing slag for road maintenance. Concerning this award, recommended by Chester and his chief engineer, L. F. Bechtel, McGovern said:

"The Duquesne Slag Company has been getting hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the county. There should be some competition for this business. They were the only bidders."

Chester said he has information that other bidders were kept out of the competition for the slag business by the Duquesne Slag Company. Re-advertisement of slag bids was authorized by the commissioners.

WATER PLANT PLANNED FOR MT. LEBANON

If a substantial rate reduction is not offered by the South Pittsburgh Water Company, a committee of Mt. Lebanon citizens is ready to go ahead with plans for a water works system to be operated by the township.

George P. Kountz, chairman of the committee recently appointed by Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioners, has declared that he believes a plant can be built which will furnish water at not more than 25 cents per thousand gallons and that the above rate will refund the money invested in 15 years.

RATES COMPARED

This compares with the present rate of the South Pittsburgh Water Company of 33 cents per thousand on the first 12,000 gallons used in each quarter plus a quarterly ready-to-serve charge of $2.

The South Pittsburgh Water Company has informed the Public Service Commission that by September 15 it will file a new schedule of rates, according to word from Harrisburg. This action followed informal conferences between commissioners and water company officials.

Officials of the company here have stated that the rate negotiations are entirely in the hands of the New York office. The company is controlled by the American Water Works and Electric Company.

EXCEEDS CITY CHARGE

The present rate on the first bracket of meter rates charged by the South Pittsburgh Water Company of 33 cents compares with approximately 28½ cents charged by the Pennsylvania Water Company and 20 cents by the City of Pittsburgh.

The City Bureau of Water usually makes enough to pay expenses, including interest on bonds and sinking fund requirements. It does not, however, earn enough to provide for plant replacements.

The Mt. Lebanon plan to furnish its own water would mean a new pumping station somewhere along the Monongahela River, and the construction of a standpipe and a new system of water lines. The Public Service Commission will be agreeable to the new project, Kountz believes.

BUCS FACE FURTHER DROP

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

That Southpaw Epidemic. Zabala Among Greats.
Yankees Pull for Cubs. Stopping Hockey Balks.

LEFT-HAND SWINGERS OUTHIT MATES

THOUGH THE DISASTROUS slump in which the Pirates lost 14 out of 15 games up to today is attributed largely to the fact than in 11 of the 15 engagements a batting order top-heavy with left-hand hitters had to face southpaw pitchers, it is a peculiar fact that as far as straight batting averages are concerned the fork-hand hurling was more effective against the Pittsburgh right-hand batters than against the players swinging from the south side of the plate.

Lloyd Waner

In the 11 games in which southpaws were encountered, the Pirates' right-hand batters, omitting the pitchers, made 42 hits in 160 times at bat for an average of .263. Pitchers included, the right-hand figures were 46 hits in 190 times at bat for a mark of .242. Against this, the five left-hand hitters in the Buccaneer attack batted .271 against the southpaws, with 52 hits in 192 times up. The trouble was that the bulk of it was done by only two men. The lefties have not hurt the averages of Paul Waner or Gus Suhr. The former hit .350 in the 11 contests, and Suhr rose above his regular average to .293. The others took a slide, Floyd Vaughan hitting only .270, while Lloyd Waner and Earl Grace were held at .227 each. The throttling of Lloyd Waner, who failed to knock a ball out of the infield in nine times at bat against Eppa Rixey and Joe Shaute Saturday and yesterday, has been the hardest blow in the southpaw epidemic. When Little Poison isn't getting on, the Pirates don't win.

ONE BASEBALL man who views the Dodgers as strong pennant possibilities, even though he is pulling for another club, is Joe McCarthy, "The Cubs have a corking chance to win out," said the Yankee manager, "but watch out for Brooklyn. I have had a hunch about the Dodgers all season, and the way things are shaping up now it would not surprise me one bit if they came through.

"If Vance can let out a notch on the hill, Wilson and O'Doul will do the rest. However, that angle on the Dodgers' winning is a fear and not a wish. My sympathies are with Chicago. For me, a world series between the Yankees and Cubs would be like waking up from a wonderful dream and finding it all true."

LIKE THEIR manager, the Yankees hope the Cubs will be their opponents in the world series, assuming that New York will win the American league pennant. Not that they have anything against the other contenders, but they are looking at the financial side.

The New York players figure that a Yank-Cub series, even in a year of depression, would be the richest of them all. Their own stadium will seat 74,000 with a possible intake of $250,000 at every game.

THE CHICAGO end of the series, it is conjectured, would be more profitable than a series played in any of the other National League cities now having a pennant chance. Wrigley Field would be good for an attendance of about 50,000 daily, against 46,000 in Boston, 42,000 in Pittsburgh with extra seats built, and only about 32,000 in Brooklyn. Thoughts of playing part of a world series in the Phils' cigar box, where the attendance could not far exceed 17,000, give the Yanks a headache, though it is probable that in event of a Quaker victory the Philadelphia games would be moved to the park of the A's.

FORMER PIRATES did not fare well in the latest Pacific Coast League changes. Three of them were released outright. Infielder Ben Sankey and Outfielder Foy Frazier by the Missions, and Outfielder Pete Scott by Seattle.

Ben Sankey

Several other ex-Bucs are among the outstanding performers of the Coast League, particularly among the pitchers. Louis Koupal was leading the loop in the latest averages with 11 games won against 4 lost for Portland. Emil Yde, with Hollywood, had won 10 and lost 5, and Tom Sheehan, with the same club, had won 7 and lost 4.

ONE OF the surprises of the American League season has been the catching of Moe Berg for Washington. Walter Johnson says that, barring Bill Dickey and Mickey Cochrane, Berg has caught as well as any other backstop in the circuit, besides contributing a gratifying number of timely wallops with his bat.

Before being picked up by the Senators, Moe was released by both the White Sox and Indians. He speaks seven languages, most of which he learned at Princeton, but in Chicago and Cleveland the complaint was that he couldn't talk base hits.

Speculation as to whether or not Juan Carlos Zabala would have been the winner of the Olympic Marathon if the entry of the favored candidate, Paavo Nurmi, had not been turned down, has led to talk of matching the two great runners for a "world championship" Marathon. It is unlikely that anything will come of it, but it sure would be considerable of a race. Zabala, only 20 years old and weighing but 119 pounds, has won a place among the greatest distance runners of all time. The Argentine lad trains entirely on meat, thriving on a diet that is strictly opposed to all American conditioning principles.

NELS STEWART, one of hockey's greatest players, isn't going to get away with his stand against the trade that sent him to the Boston club from the Montreal Maroons. He declared he would not report to the Bruins and demanded a transfer to Les Canadiens, his threats being taken so seriously that for a time the Frenchmen were all ready to send another player to Boston in exchange for him.

But Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, has stepped in and ruled that Stewart must either play in Boston or get out of organized hockey and remain idle. With trades planned all around the circuit, Calder saw the possibility of other players raising similar objections to transfers if Stewart carried his point, so he decided to block all such tactics by bringing the iron fist down on Nels.

REPORTS that in his preparations for his bout with Primo Carnera in Newark, N. J., tonight, Stanley Poreda featured punching, rather than boxing, lead veteran fistic observers to express the opinion that Poreda will make a mistake if he sticks to that style when he gets in the ring with the Vast Venetian.

Joe Jeannette's coaching has made the Polish heavyweight an excellent boxer. Sticking to his natural style and depending on skill, Stanley would stand a good chance of outpointing his heavier and slower opponent. But that he can beat Carnera through punching power is doubted. Primo has been floored by only Sharkey, Stribling and Gains, and none of that trio could keep him down.

Isadoro Gastanaga

Speaking of the ability of Carnera to weather hard wallops, the impression is growing that Isadoro Gastanaga would have as good a chance as anyone of flattening the Italian giant. But after what Gastanaga did to Charley Retzlaff last week, it is doubtful if Carnera's handlers will be in any hurry to send him against the surprising Spaniard. Gastanaga continues to be the talk of the heavyweight division and is conceded to have big possibilities. He is 24 and has been boxing five years, scoring 44 knockouts in 55 fights. His only American start before the Retzlaff match was the bout in which he defeated Hans Birkie.

OAKMONT STAR HAS 72, YOUNG CARDS 73

By TOM BIRKS

Raymond L. Babcock, Oakmont veteran who this season is playing the best golf of his illustrious career, today matched Oakmont's difficult par to assume the leadership at the finish of the first 18-hole round in the 36-hole National amateur golf tournament district qualifying test at the Oakmont Country Club today.

The six low scorers in today's event will represent the Pittsburgh district in the National competition at Baltimore, beginning September 12.

OUT IN GREAT 34

A sensational jaunt to the turn, which he reached in 34, three under par, featured Babcock's round, and gave him a one-stroke edge over Knox M. Young, Jr., former West Penn junior champion from the Highland Country Club, with the fight half over. Young negotiated the out nine in 35, but, like Babcock, slumped and took 38, three over par, in making the homeward jaunt. Oakmont par and the cards of the leaders:

Fred Brand, Jr., of Penn State and Shannopin, and George Flinn, of Oakmont, were the only other entrants able to break 80 for the first round. Each negotiated the first 18 holes in 76.

The second and final 18-hole round is being played this afternono, and indications are that the fight for the fifth and sixth berths will be an extremely open one.

At Valley Heights, Ted Luther has started from the tee a record number of members of the Purchasing Agents' Association of Pittsburgh in their annual tournament.

DEL VECCHIO VICTOR

Perry Del Vecchio, well liked little pro of the Greensburg Country Club, stroked his way to the West Penn Open championship over the 36-hole route at South Hills Country Club yesterday, the diminutive Greensburger turning in a classy 71-66-137 to nose out the state Open champion, Vincent Eldred, Highland, by four shots.

The popular Highlander, as consistent as ever, had turned in 69-72-141, one under par, and seemed to have the tourney in hand when Perry started on his birdie and par orgy, which ended with the title safely tucked away.

Maurice Le Bosquet took third place with rounds of 73-70, for a total of 143, and three of the best shotmakers in the tri-state district, Pete O'Hara, defending champion, Sam Parks, Jr., of the Summit Club, and Fred Baroni, of Oakland Beach, tied for fourth with 145. Ted Luther, professional at Valley Heights, together with Wayne Tobias, of Greensburg, assistant to Perry, tied for last money with a gross 147.

SHOOTS FINE GOLF

Perry's brilliant slashing round of four under par golf will be talked of for many days. Perry turned on the steam with the state Open champion already in. Eldred's 141 was good enough to win in an ordinary tournament, one-under-par golf being as good as golfers expect over John Graham's well-kept layout, but it was not good enough to count out Del Vecchio. Perry has a penchant for getting hot on his second round and lived up to expectations.

The second annual Schenley public links tournament will be staged September 26, according to an announcement by Ken Witherow, U. S. G. A. representative. Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, is the present champion. Play will be over the 36-hole route.

Mrs. F. M. Sloan, of Edgewood, topped the field in the one-day W. G. A. tourney at Shannopin yesterday with a low gross of 86. The low net prize was divided by Miss Fitzpatrick, of Chartiers Heights, and Margaret Davidson, of Montour, each carding 101-23 —78.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: MULES WITH THE TOBACCO HABIT—The Empire-North Star properties, a gold-mining concern in Grass Valley, Cal., have underground galleries running down to a 4,500-foot depth, some of which are not equipped with modern electric hauling machinery. The few mules they still retain for hauling ore chew tobacco and refuse to work if deprived of their "chaw." They are so accustomed to their work below the ground that the owners believe they would die if removed to the surface.

WOOD BEATEN AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Dave Jones, of New York, today provided the Newport Casino tennis tournament with its first major upset by eliminating Sidney Wood, of New York, seeded third, in a bruising extra set third round match by scores of 3-6, 6-3, 8-6. The unseeded player's ability to handle Wood's soft but tricky service carried him to victory.

The list of foreign seedings lost a member when J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., conquered John S. Olliff, of England, ranked fourth in the draw, in another overtime contest by scores of 6-3, 3-6, 6-2. Wilmer Allison, United States Davis Cup star, had an easy passage into the fourth round, eliminating Herbert L. Bowman, New York, 6-2, 6-2.

Homestead to Honor Olympic Swim Stars

Homestead is planning a gala welcome for Lenore Kight and Anna Mae Gorman, two of its star swimmers who made the Olympic team, and their coach, Jack Scarry, when the three return from the Pacific Coast. No date has been set for the celebration, the affair depending on what day the stars return.

The Olympic members and their coach will be greeted on their arrival in Homestead and a parade will be staged from the station to the athletic field.

STAGG REACHES 70 TODAY

By JESS CARVER

Amos Alonzo Stagg, the man who found Ponce De Leon's fountain of youth in clean living and athletics, celebrates his birthday anniversary today. He is 70 years young, looks 20 years less, and into his modest home in Chicago are pouring telegrams and messages of congratulation and best wishes from all portions of the nation.

The dean of football coaches, beloved by thousands who have played with him, played under him and met him as an opponent, the rugged veteran is ready to embark on his forty-first season as a coach at Chicago. Right now, he's in California, serving as a technical advisor on a football movie.

He's got 'em all guessing in the Western Conference, too, for he plans to unloose something new in Maroon elevens. Stagg's in his "dangerous seventies," and he has 'em worried in the Big Ten.

No other individual, Rockne, Warner, Jones, Little, Steffen, Sutherland, Yost, Meehan, or even the great Walter Camp can boast of having contributed more to the ethics of college competition. He has been a crusader of sportsmanship, sincere in his high standard of fair play and strict amateurism. He's been a leader in the development of football, as a player for Yale, a coach and a member of the American Rules Committee, of which he now is the senior member.

This correspondent recalls a monster football luncheon in the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco a couple of years back, with the Army football team honor guests and coaches from all parts of the country, Spears, Warner, Rockne, Howard Jones, Biff Jones, Tom Davies, the late Walter Eckersall and other gridiron luminaries, present. Each was accorded a rousing ovation, but when Stagg, a surprise arrival, entered the dining room, the entire assemblage, without prearrangement, rose to its feet and gave the grizzled veteran an ovation as long as it was thunderous. The soup was jelled when order finally was restored.

PIRATES LOSE SERIES OPENER TO DODGERS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The crisis the Pirates face today has to do with third place, as well as with the top position. Another defeat at the hands of the Dodgers would send the Pittsburghers down to the third notch in the league standing.

Max Carey's fast-going Dodgers have trimmed the Pirates in the last four clashes of the two teams and on every occasion, a lefthander has opposed the Pittsburghers. Sad to relate, the Pirates have come to be a pushover for southpaws.

Beaten 14 times in their last 15 games, the Freebooters have seen no less than 11 lefthanders start against them in the doleful string of setbacks. The need of a flock of righthand batters to break up the southpaw epidemic seems apparent.

LEFTHANDERS TOUGH

The cunning Carey used nothing but lefthanders as starters to win three games in succession from the Pirates when they are in Brooklyn and it is said that Max has the same three forkhanders set for action here. He assigned Joe Shaute to the slab yesterday and the Dodgers gave Joe so many runs at the outset the former American League pitcher rolled along to victory without exerting himself.

Either Bill Clarke or Fred Heimach will face the Pirates this afternoon. Manager Gibson will give his own lefthander, Larry French, an opportunity to stop the rush of the Flatbush gang.

Heinie Meine felt the spleen in the Brooklyn bats in the first inning of yesterday's clash. The Dodgers piled up nine markers in the first round but the pitcher probably would have got out of the round in fair shape had not Piet and Vaughan kicked in with two very costly errors. The two kids had their heads in the air watching the runners while reaching for grounders they failed to get. Bill Harris went to the aid of Meine in the inning, but he, too, shelled off the mound in the second. The final score was 11-6.

Leon Chagnon entered the game in the second and from that point to the finish the Dodgers could not get a man across the home dish. The damage had been done however, for while the Buccos made a commendable fight, which included a homer by Suhr, they did not get close to the invaders.

CHILLYSAUCE

Danny Taylor came out of the first Pirate-Dodger engagement with four hits. The district speedboy is playing great ball for Max Carey.

Taylor made two hits in the first inning. He opened the contest with a triple. Lloyd Waner seemed to get a poor start on the ball, his actions indicating he was not well.

The Pirates were terribly weak against southpaws last season, but it was felt they would master them this year. Apparently they did until the "lefties" found their control.

The fact that 11 southpaws have started against the home club in their last 15 games is convincing proof of what rival managers think of our attack. The question is no longer a theory, but a painful fact.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Well, I see the Chicago Cubs can now do a little smoking around the clubhouse. That's a smart decision by Charley Grimm. Charley figures where there is smoke there must be some fire. And some fire is just what the Cubs need. In fact, Grimm would like to fan them into a four-alarm blaze.

Just because Hornsby didn't use tobacco himself, I guess he thought his boys should go around smoking cubebs. Sometimes managers have such silly rules like that you don't know whether you're playing for Chicago or Vassar.

I don't claim big league players are entitled to be occasionally plastered, although even that isn't the worst recipe in the world. Just to recall the pitching of Rube Waddell, Bugs Raymond and Grover Alexander, for instance—and those boys were not trained on malted milk.

By JAMES MILLER

Well, folks, Battling Gizzy, the Donora Windmill, like the depression, still is with us.

Yes, sir, just when everyone thought the Battler was due for a drop back to the preliminaries, after losing to Tony Canzoneri, Wesley Ramey and appearing anything but pleasing in his win over Chico Cisneros, he showed a complete reversal of form last night by pounding out a decisive 10-round victory over Charley Baxter, the hard-punching lad, of McKees Rocks, in the main event at Hickey Park, Millvale, before the largest crowd of the season.

WINS IN WALK

Gizzy, with his sudden return to oldtime form and punching straight with his right hand, won eight of the 10 rounds, losing the first and being held even in the seventh.

Baxter, the favorite before the bout, drove his right to Gizzy's chin three times in succession in the first round, but his failure to press the advantage permitted Gizzy to regain his composure and throw a few gloves himself. Gizzy wrestled Baxter to the floor in this round and drew a warning from Referee Al Grayber. From then on until the seventh, Gizzy had things his own way, belting Baxter all over the ring. Baxter went to the floor in the fourth and fifth rounds as Gizzy pulled roughly from half clinches.

In the seventh round, Baxter nailed Gizzy with a sharp right to the jaw and had Abie Witz' pride fairly wobbly, but again Charley failed to follow up with more punches of that variety, and Gizzy came back strong in the latter part of the round to even matters. Gizzy finished very strong, carrying the fight to Baxter in the last three rounds.

Gizzy took off plenty of weight for the fight, and maybe that was responsible for his unusual showing. He came in at 132¼ pounds, while Baxter scaled 131¾.

ASTO, SENICH DRAW

Don Asto, of Uniontown, recently out of the amateurs, really had a shade in his semi-final bout, put on after the main event, with Steve Senich, of Homestead, but the official decision was recorded as a draw, after six rounds of fast milling. Freddie Lux voted for Senich, Joe Zivic, the other judge, casted his ballot for Asto, and Referee Grayber called the affair a draw. Asto weighed 132¼ pounds and Senich 129½.

Al Sunseri, of Mt. Washington, making his pro debut, looked very pleasing as he hammered out a six-round verdict over Tommy Criggan, of Homestead, in the second bout. Al, a ripping-in style of a fighter, pounded Criggan's body throughout the scrap. Criggan weighed 132 and Sunseri 135¼.

Johnny Riske, of the South Hills, another new member of the money fighters, weighing 156¼ pounds, dropped Jimmy Bell, of Duquesne, 153¼, for nine counts in the third and fourth rounds, and finally forced him to quit cold in his corner and refuse to come up for the fifth round. Riske was the winner by a technical knockout.

HAMBLETONIAN ENTRIES SET

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(INS.)—Seven 3-year-old trotters were nominated this afternoon for the $60,000 Hambeltonian Stake to be decided here tomorrow.

The final entry list fell short of the mark expected. Twelve were figured as almost certain starters for the "derby" of the harness sport, but a few owners balked today at posting the $500 final entry fee.

Maid McElwyn, 2-year-old champion last year, and winter book favorite for this year's running of the big stake, was the most prominent absentee. Jane Willet, which had been performing creditably in the past few weeks and was regarded as one of the choicee, was another left out of the entries.

The list of entries follows—Mrs. Will Caton's The Marchioness, Hanover Shoe Farm's Calumet Chuck; W. N. Reynold's Brevere; E. Ronald Harriman's Calumet Crusader invader; Henry Oliver's The Lad, and J. L. Dodge's Hollyrood Dennis.

The Marchioness remains the early favorite at 3-to-2 with Hollyrood Dennis second choice at 3-to-1. Calumet Chuck ranks third at 8-to-1 and the odds on the other starters range from 12 to 1 to 20 to 1.

Four were named for the $5,000 Geers Event, pacing division of the Hammletonian. They are Raider, Perry Scot, Rip Honover and Calumet Charles.

CHAMP VICTOR IN WOMEN'S CITY GOLF

Mrs. Margaret Curry, defending champion, medalist and title favorite, advanced into the second round in the annual city women's golf championship by defeating Mrs. Eva Blair, 2 up, in their first-round match at the Schenley Park municipal links today.

Mrs. Curry and Mrs. Blair have fought it out for the crown in the final several times, and in winning today Mrs. Curry was regarded as having disposed of her most dangerous rival.

The defending titleholder, who won the medal with an 81 yesterday, had to shoot spectacular golf to win today. Out in a great 37, she faltered on the finishing holes to all but dissipate a once big lead. A rally on home hole gave her the decision and a medal score of 79 for the round. The cards:

British Net Stars Pair for Doubles

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Henry R. Guild, president and referee of the fifty-first annual Longwood tennis tournament, which will be held next week at Brookline, announced Herbert W. Austin and Fred J. Perry, singles specialists, would be paired in an effort to capture the national championship.

Present Senators Defeat Champs of 1924

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The toll of the years counted yesterday as the 1924 world champion Washington team bowed to the Nationals of 1932 in a baseball festival held as part of the George Washington bicentennial.

The score was 6 to 2, and the old master, Walter Johnson, yielded five of these runs in his first three innings on the mound. Bucky Harris, now manager of Detroit, let in the first run when he dropped a fly. Inability of the veterans, Johnson and Judge, to negotiate a play at first led to a four-run rally in the third.

But the champions of old had the roaring support of a crowd of more than 12,000. The Nationals showered Al Schack, comedian-coach, with tomatoes and cabbages as he went to the third base line in the first inning for the champions. In the seventh the team of today galloped en masse to the flagpole and hauled down the world championship banner. They put it up again in the next inning.

Marberry relieved Johnson after the third inning.

BROIDA, MAITS BOW IN PARKS NET PLAY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Play in men's doubles and women's singles and concluding matches in the second round of the men's singles were on the schedule today of the tenth annual national public parks tennis tournament here.

Favorites who survived the opening day of play yesterday were in for sterner opposition today. Dennision L. Mitchell, of Washington, D. C., seeded No. 1, faced Harvey Terrill, of Birmingham, in a third-round encounter. Terrill and Mitchell both advanced to the third round yesterday after drawing byes in the first round.

George O'Connell, of Chicago, seeded No. 2, opposed Benjamin Estep, flashy Dallas, Tex., player, in a second-round match. Ted Drewes, of St. Louis, No. 3 player, was pitted against Leo Bottari, of New York, and Arnold Simons, of Louisville, seeded No. 4, was matched with Barnard Welsh, of Washington, D. C., in other matches.

In yesterday's contests Mitchell eliminated Gus Amsterdam, of Philadelphia. O'Connell ousted Charles Maits, of Pittsburgh. Drewes beat Frank Broida, also of Pittsburgh, and Simons disposed of Frank Kronauge, Dayton, O., veteran.

None of the championships won in last year's tournament is being defended this year.

Between Rounds

Nat Litfin, of the Hill, and Jack Wilson, Negro bantamweight, of Homewood, have been matched for the eight-round semi-final to the Willie Davies-Moze Hutch main go at Greenlee Field, Thursday night. Joey Speigel, who defeated Max Elling in his last appearance in the Hill arena, meets Jacquette Everillo in the second bout.

Eddie Kapphan, who ran fights on the Hill last winter, is said to be helping Jackie Rodgers along in order that the Negro puncher may enter a hospital and have the cataract removed from his eye.

Max Elling, the Kingfish, will undergo a nose operation in a few days for the removal of a growth that has been hampering his breathing. According to Danny Kyar, his manager, he will be ready to go again in a few weeks.

Curley Klaas, of the North Side, who as an amateur, scored 19 knockouts in 22 bouts, will turn pro on the Greenlee Field card Thursday night of next week against Jack Smiley, Negro heavy, of the Hill. Jack DeNeri, former featherweight boxer, is training Klaas.

Two amateur shows are carded tonight. On the North Side, St. Peter's Lyceum will stage another one of its benefit shows for the needy of that section, with a card of five bouts. Art McGivern, of the Willow A. C., boxes Young Florida, of the Buff A. C., in the feature bout. The other show will be held at New Kensington, sponsored by the American Legion. Rudy Ceder, a sensation hereabouts a few years back as a welterweight, is the matchmaker. Eight bouts are on the program.

Professor Bunny Buntack, manager of George Panka, who boxes Frank Novak, of the North Side, in John Hernon's second "natural" of the season at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night, says the reason he took so long in making the match was because good matches are not made in a day, and that this is a sufficiently good bout to warrant some delay.

Reading Legion Nine Meets Spengler Post

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Opening the regional American Legion baseball series, the Keystone Juniors, of Reading, Pa., and the Spengler Post team, of the District of Columbia, today were matched, while the other three entries drew byes.

The game was scheduled for 2:30 o'clock this afternoon with Mayor George Henderson, of Cumberland, tossing in the first ball

HELEN JACOBS OPENS TITLE QUEST TODAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—The field cut to 32 players, the second day's program of the women's national tennis championships today featured the initial appearance of Helen Jacobs, prime favorite to succeed to the title relinquished by Helen Wills Moody.

First round play yesterday was uneventful and marked by no upsets, although the second seeded player, Mrs. L. A. Harper, of Oakland, was carried to three sets by Eleanor Goss, of New York, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.

Josephine Cruickshank, Virginia Hilleary, Carolyn Babcock, Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter and Mrs. J. B. Pittman, of England, all seeded, advanced in straight sets.

Miss Jacobs, given a first-round bye, drew Virginia Rice, of Boston, for her first opponent. Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia; Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., and Joan Ridley, of England, were the other seeded players making their first starts. Mrs. Van Ryn was to play Clara Louise Zinke, of Cincinnati; Miss Palfrey clashed with Alice Marble, of San Francisco, and Miss Ridley met Allison Harrison, of Philadelphia.

Other leading pairings were: Miss Cruickshank vs. Mianne Palfrey; Mrs. Pittman vs. Marjorie Sachs; Mrs. Harper vs. Mrs. A. J. Lamme; Bonnie Miller vs. Mae Ceurvorst; Miss Babcock vs. Mrs. Dorothy Andrus Burke, and Mrs. Painter vs. Dorrance Chase.

Place Nag Pays $626.54 for $2 At Dade Park

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Kentucky race tracks, famous for their long mutuel prices, put over another one yesterday, when Orchestration finished second in a six-furlong dash at Dade Park and returned $626.54 for a $2 place ticket.

Although not a record, the price was one of the longest in the history of racing on the American turf. The longest place price was returned by Baal at Hialeah Park last winter, when he paid $971.10 for $2. By a queer twist in mutuel betting, Orchestration would have returned only 272 to 1 if he had succeeded in defeating Jessie Carey, winner of the race.

The record win price also was hung up on a Kentucky track, Wishing Ring paying 941 to 1 in 1912 at Latonia.

Japan May Stage Olympics in 1940

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—William May Garland, president of the Los Angeles organizing committee, which staged the international games just finished, wants to see the Olympic torch carried to Tokio in 1940.

One of America's three members of the international Olympic committee, Garland said he would help Japan get the twelfth Olympiad. He said:

"It will be a long distance for some of the nations to travel, just as Los Angeles was a long journey for many parts of the world, but I believe the Japanese can, and if given the opportunity, will stage one of the most successful Olympiads in history."

PRINTER NINES NEAR FINAL

ST. PAUL, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Washington and Cincinnati, two of the leading teams in the Union Printers International baseball tournament, meet today for the right to enter the finals. The winner will meet New York, which drew a bye, for the title tomorrow.

Washington, defending the championship it won in 1931, was a slight favorite over the strong Cincinnati team, which lost its first game yesterday. The Ohioans were beaten in their first clash with Washington, 5 to 4.

New York stayed in the running by eliminating the Twin Cities, 16 to 8, yesterday.

SCHMELING TO BOX WALKER

MAX, MICKEY TO CLASH ON SEPT. 19

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Max Schmeling, who whipped Jack Sharkey and lost his championship, and Mickey Walker, who did the same thing and got a draw, will meet at the Madison Square Garden's Long Island Bowl on Monday night, September 19, in a bout scheduled for 15 rounds. The contest will be promoted jointly by the Garden and the Free Milk Fund for Babies, Inc.

Terms were finally agreed upon yesterday, but not until after Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, had stormed out of William F. Carey's office, headed for the elevator, Chicago and King Levinsky. Then, and not until then, did Jack Kearns, manager of Walker, capitulate.

CHAMP GETS MOST

Schmeling will receive twice as much as Walker, although Garden officials would not divulge the figures for publication. The boxing commission limits clubs to 50 per cent for the main event and Gen. John J. Phelan gave Carey an earnest lecture about paying more than that scale for Sharkey and Schmeling.

Doctor Kearns held out manfully for 22½ per cent for Walker, and it was not until Jacobs made his rush for the exits that he nodded his surrender.

A formal signing ceremony will be held Thursday afternoon.

Taking the small end of the percentage was a bitter pill for Kearns. He took the small end for a chance at Sharkey last year because he was sure Walker would establish himself as a legitimate heavyweight contender. Walker had a clear margin over Sharkey, but the effect was far from what it should have been.

TOUGH ON MICKEY

Sharkey frankly admitted he would never fight Walker again, and other heavyweights followed his example. Mickey has had to be satisfied with the Riskos and Paulinos ever since.

James J. Johnston estimated the bout will draw close to $350,000.

COLTS BEATEN BY SENATORS

Charleston's Senators evened matters with the Cumberland Colts in their series at Cumberland yesterday, the Senator's battering Chip Helmick's offerings to all sections of the lot in the first two innings and emerging with an eventual 9-to-3 victory.

At Huntington, the Clarksburg Generals took the final game of the series from the Boosters, 5 to 1, as Spencer limited the home nine to six scattered hits.

Johnstown's ninth inning rally fell a run short of tying the score and the Johns bowed to Beckley's Black Knights, 5 to 4, at Beckley. Beckley secured 16 safe hits from the delivery of Thompson.

The teams, the Reliance Life nine, with the home run clouter, Soapy Heyl, in the lineup, and the North Siders, provide the feature engagement of the day in the City circuit.

In a second league fray, Homewood and the Geislers battle at Stowe High School Field.

Frick Park takes on Pitcairn and Carnegie tackles Bellevue in County League contests this evening. The County League nines have been playing before exceptionally good crowds this season and tonight's engagements promise to attract banner turnouts of fans.

In last evening's City League engagements, the Books cut the lead of the J. L. Thomas nine to a single game in the City League, defeating the Bloomfielders, 6 to 1. Lou Jacoby hurled a fine game for the victors. The Frank Ferris nine turned in a surprise win over the second place Dormont outfit, 2 to 1.

In independent features, Soho McKnights won over Juliano, 7 to 6, and Iroquois defeated Williams, 11 to 5.

Pittsburgh Interests Large Buyers of Aluminum

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—The market yesterday gave indications of having recovered from last week's shakeout, and its action at the close was strongly suggestive of higher prices today. The tip-off came in the complete absence of pressure when the du Pont dividend cut was announced. From this it would appear that stocks have had sufficient correction. With some help from higher commodity prices, the market could easily rise to last week's tops. Then the test will come.

Bank stock men, who for some time have maintained that securities of the New York City institutions were far behind the "big board," and other markets, are all smiles today.

Yesterday's bulge in bank stocks was accompanied by revival of speculative interest.

There also were reports of important buying, with one well-posted group going into National City quite heavily. Bank stocks are perhaps the most sensitive barometer of security markets, generally, and their upturn late yestreday is significant. There has been considerable accumulation in Aluminum Company of America, the kingpin outfit of the Mellons. Interests identified with the Pittsburgh crowd have been large buyers and are talking of important developments soon. Aluminum is one of those skittish issues with an extremely thin market, and in the past has had even Auburn tied to the mast. Pittsburgh also has grown very partial to Westinghouse again and is taking stock.

BALDWIN JULY BACKLOG AT NEW LOW

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Business booked by the Baldwin Locomotive Works and affiliated companies in July reached a new low for the year at $385,000. So far this year Baldwin has not received an order for a single new engine, American Locomotive reported receipt of an order for only one new engine during the half year period.

Probably the greater part of the bookings shown in consolidated report represents business taken by affiliated companies in the Baldwin group, while the parent company's contribution to the gross volume was in orders for parts and specialties which were sold to railroads to make repairs in their own shops.

EXPENSES REDUCED

No substantial change in business is apparent. With operating costs cut to the bone, it is anticipated that the loss for the third quarter of the year will be less than the loss for the third quarter of 1931.

If some of the railroads approve the proposal of the administration that they accept loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to repair and replace equipment the results will probably begin to show in Baldwin's operations for the final quarter of the year, although most of the benefits so far as Baldwin and other equipment companies are concerned would not come until 1933.

PENNSYLVANIA ORDER

Baldwin shops are working on the order for 54 heavy passenger electrics for the Pennsylvania Railroad placed last year, and 16 locomotives have been delivered to date, with shipments going forward at the rate of six additional engines a month. Work has not yet been started on the order for 20 electric freight locomotives for the Pennsylvania which was also placed last year.

B. & O. to Refund $63,000,000 Bonds

The new bonds will be issued in two series and will bear interest at either 5 per cent or 6 per cent.

Rail Leaders to Discuss Wage Cut at Meeting This Week

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Further wage cuts and drastic economies are to be considered by the country's most important railway executives at a meeting expected to be held in Chicago this week.

Presidents of the principal eastern carriers met in New York last week and, although no formal statement was issued, it was understood the payroll question was threshed out and the decision tentatively reached that employes should be asked to take another reduction when the present labor agreement expires February 1, next.

While some hopes are held for improved traffic returns by fall or winter, most of the carriers are in the condition of not knowing "where the next meal is coming from." The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has already provided huge funds to stave off interest defaults by many roads and numerous applications for further loans are now pending. Rail officials claim not only must they again reduce wages and salaries, but that all other operating costs must be cut to the bone.

Wages Now 13½% Under Year Ago

Just what further wage reduction employes will be asked to take has not yet been determined. Twenty-one unions "voluntarily" accepted a 10 per cent reduction from standard rates about six months ago. Last May, the latest month on which wage statistics are available, the average compensation per employe was around 13½ per cent less than a year ago.

While the organized railway crafts may be again asked to sacrifice a percentage of their earnings, it is reported the higher salaried brackets of the unorganized employes may suffer the most. It is said the unions plan to use the Inter-State Commerce Commision's report on the big salaries paid high officials of the railroads as an argument against further reduction of their own wages.

Various Steps In Procedure

When carriers decide on a wage cut, the procedure usually is to summon a joint meeting of railway and union officials. If no agreement is reached at that meeting, the next step is, under the law, for the roads to inform the labor organizations of the proposed cut in a formal notice of the proposed reduction. Within 10 days of the issuance of this notice, another conference of the two parties must be called.

In case officials and workers again fail to agree, the Federal Board of Mediation may offer its services. If this fails, arbitration may then be resorted to and, as a final resort, the President of the United States is empowered to create a special board of inquiry which must report its findings to him within 30 days. During the interim, however, any overt act is forbidden either side.

B. & O. SEEKING REPAIR LOAN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(INS.)—An application for a $3,000,000 equipment loan was filed with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

Willard explained that the directors of his road have approved the request for the loan. He said:

"The $3,000,000 will be used chiefly for repairs to locomotives and for completing certain new equipment authorized by the road, but on which work was suspended several months ago."

Willard discussed with members of the board the general policies involved in the recent decision to make equipment loans to railroads at 5 per-cent interest.

The purpose of these loans, as explained by the board, is to give employment to railroad workers and to workers in factories furnishing railroad equipment. The Baltimore and Ohio application is the first large one received since this policy was announced.

RAIL EQUITIES RISE TO NEW HIGH LEVELS

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP.)—Railroad shares pushed through to new highs for the summer recovery in today's stock market, but the list as a whole was unable to follow.

The session began with a wild flurry of buying, which boosted many issues 1 to 7 points, but trading turned quieter, and profit-taking was encountered, as the session wore on. Rails came up strongly in the middle of the day, but as the session went into the fourth hour, the peak levels of the first few minutes had not, in the aggregate, been duplicated.

Union Pacific, Case, Allied Chemical and Norfolk and Western made extreme gains of 6 to 7 points, but the first three soon lost 2 to 3 points of the advance. United States Steel opened 4⅞ higher at 45, with a 10,000-share purchase, but thereafter slid back a couple of points. American Telephone was a firm feature in the afternoon, getting up more than 4 to duplicate the high of the morning. Miscellaneous issues making extreme gains of 2 to 3 points included American Can, Westinghouse, Eastman, American Tobacco B, Liggett and Myers B, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, Chesapeake and Ohio, Southern Pacific and others. Issues up a point or so included Radio, General Electric, General Motors and Standard of New Jersey. Coppers were sluggish.

Renewed firmness in various commodities, and further optimistic reports from textile centers, remained the principal stimuli to higher prices, outside of the market itself. The feverish trading in the first half hour, when some 800,000 shares were traded, or four times the turnover of the like period of yesterday, indicated another frightened flurry of short covering. A considerable element of the bear faction had evidently been surprised by the sudden comeback of the market late yesterday.

The ability of the rails to lead the list into new high ground, at a time when many prominent carriers are keeping their heads above water only through borrowing from the Reconstruction Corporation, has been one of the phenomena of the recent upswing. Nevertheless, some quarters in Wall street are confident of a reasonably early restoration of earning power by the principal roads. Some unofficial estimates indicate that New York Central, for instance, may break even in August, after reporting a deficit of more than $3,000,000 in June, and having had a similar loss in July. Feverish buying of this issue of late has given rise to rumors that an open market struggle for control might be developing. L. F. Loree, the veteran head of the Delaware and Hudson Company, has denied that he was seeking a large interest in Central.

Brokers reported active public participation in the market, still coming from many cities. Gossip regarding pool manipulations has started to buzz around the commission house board rooms, although there was considerable difference of opinion as to how important a factor syndicate operations have become.

COTTON HITS NEW HIGHS

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 3 higher in response to steadier Liverpool cables and on Wall street and foreign buying which absorbed considerable southern selling.

There was also considerable realizing or liquidation, but buying was stimulated by the strong opening in the stock market and prices for all deliveries soon made new high ground for the movement, with December selling up to 7.74 and March to 7.96, or about 9 to 11 points net higher.

Houses with western as well as Wall street connections were among the buyers on the advance, and while the demand tapered off somewhat, the market was fairly active and steady within 2 or 3 points of the best at the end of the first half hour.

The market continued firm later in the morning. There was enough realizing and scattered selling to cause slight reactions from time to time but offerings were readily absorbed by continued trade and commission house buying. The market at midday was firm at net advances of about 15 to 17 points.

U. S. RECOVERY NOW DEPENDS ON BUSINESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
United Press Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The recently challenged upward convulsion of prices from the lowest levels of the depression at least serves notice on business executives that existing low costs might not be available forever.

The success of the renewed managed recovery, which is now under way, depends on whether business executives will feel that the time is now ripe for putting in more normal inventories and for making capital improvements. The problem at this stage of the depression is international. Over in England, for example, negotiations have been taking place between building contractors and manufacturers of building materials to try to heighten activity and reduce unemployment in the building trades.

Mr. Rukeyser

COSTS LOW

Advocates of greater activity argue that costs are unusually low, and, with falling rates of interest, it is asserted that wisely chosen types of building offer attractive investment possibilities. The great opportunity in languid England is to replace obsolete plant and equipment with more efficient modern equipment. Referring to this situation, the Manchester Guardian Commercial revealingly declares:

"Clearly costs can be much reduced if factories and mills are properly laid out. One reason, for example, why Beauvais tiles compete so successfully with British tiles is that some years ago they entirely demolished their old-fashioned tile works and reconstructed them so as to reduce manual handling of the tiles during manufacture to the minimum.

"If the present movement on the part of the building industry develops it is hoped to be able to provide information not only as to the cost of modern building under present conditions, but also reliable data as to the commercial advantages of an efficient layout."

Over here, there is a feeling that the country is greatly overequipped industrially, but the problem is not one of mere quantity, obsolescence has piled up heavily in the last three years of neglected progress. Change, however, under existing economic conditions must be justified on the ground that it would reduce costs of production, and fit in with the mandate of economy.

PROPERTY OWNERS LOSE

An astute insider in Wall street asserts that 7 out of 10 rich men who derive their income primarily from property have been crippled by the deflation.

In connection with President Hoover's projected additional drives against depression, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, economist of the Cleveland Trust Company, takes the position that a government dissipates its energies "when it leaves unsolved those fundamental problems with which it alone has the power to deal, and devotes itself to the futile task of trying to stimulate into activity the trade and industry that are tense and eager to go, but which find themselves blockaded by conditions that are beyond their control."

The Cleveland soothsayer indicated that the government ought to concern itself with our money, our credit system, our regulated railroad industry, our taxation, our national budget, and our debt and trade relations with foreign countries—rather than seeking to induce business men to stock up or to start specific projects.

"Normal business activity and even prosperity may be resumed when prices are low, but not while they are rapidly falling."

Blondie Panic-Stricken When Her Father Dies of A Heart Attack

CHAPTER XX.

The taxi came to a grinding stop before a large warehouse. Blondie and Lurline leaped out and ran down a long, dirty passage toward a sign marked "Office."

"I'm Miss McClune," said Blondie, nervously, to a girl seated at a desk. The girl motioned them to follow her, and led the way to a room at the rear of the general office. The two girls entered, and Blondie stopped suddenly as she saw her father lying back in a big arm chair, the doctor bending over him. Quickly she pulled the rings off her fingers and gave them to Lurline.

"What's the idea?"

"He hates them," Blondie said simply, and hurried to her father.

"What's the matter? . . . Are you the doctor," asked Blondie, and the doctor nodded.

"He hasn't seemed well for a long time," a man in his shirt sleeves spoke up. "He collapsed suddenly and fell off his chair—he struck his head—I think he's just stunned . . ."

"I wouldn't move him—it's not his head—that's just a scalp wound." Then he whispered in her ear, "It's a heart attack."

FAILS TO ANSWER

"Pa—Pa, it's Blondie!" she called, but there was no response from the stricken man. Blondie looked around wildly at the little group. "Oh, can't you do something?—What are you standing around for? . . . Pa!" she moaned. Lurline bent over her gently.

"Blondie! . . . Blondie!"

"Get away!" said Blondie, and frantically she turned to her father. "Pa—Pa! This is Blondie, open your eyes—look at me Pa, this is Blondie!"

For an instant she waited, and almost as if in obedience to her plea, her father's eyes fluttered open. The white, drawn, agonized face glowed for a second with a smile. His eyes turned up and slowly closed again. Pa McClure, very, very tired, went to sleep.

CALLED FOR BLONDIE

"I'm afraid not now . . ." said the doctor, gently.

"He didn't even speak—Pa!" said Blondie, in a daze. Pleadingly she looked up at the office manager. "Did he ask for me?"

"Yes . . . at once . . . I couldn't find you . . . the family were out motoring, they said—we found a newspaper clipping with your address on it in his desk—he kept calling for you until he became exhausted."

"What did he say? . . . What did he say?"

"I took it down," said a stenographer, as he reached for her notebook. "He kept calling 'Blondie . . . Blondie!' That's your name, isn't it? He said: 'Little Blondie, hurry, Pa wants you—don't stay away from me now . . . little Blondie.' That's just what he said because I took it down . . . I thought he was going then . . ."

Blondie sat perfectly still, gently petting her father's hand, seemingly unable to speak. Then suddenly she buried her face in her father's lap and burst into tears.

"I'm here, Pa! . . . Blondie's here, Pa . . ." came her muffled, sobbing voice. "Too late! . . . Too late! . . .

FAMILY DEPRESSED

The first funeral in the McClune family was over and the surviving members had returned from the cemetery. The little flat was depressed with the hush that always follows such events, and everybody talked in subdued tones.

"I think the blanket of violets that Mr. Pratt sent was the most beautiful floral creation I've ever seen," exclaimed Pete. ". . . it touched me . . . and he's never met Pa, never laid eyes on him."

Pete adjusted the crepe band on the sleeve of his checkered coat, and ignored the request. ". . . and why you instructed its removal from the casket is beyond me?"

"Why? . . . Why? . . . Blondie started to retort, but Gert cut in.

"Well, what's beyond me—if you ask, and you haven't—I think you're out of your mind, Blondie, giving up Mr. Pratt, and your apartment, and your limousine, just because poor old Pa died."

"I agree with you, Mrs. Slatterly," said Lurline.

"Oh, you do, Miss . . ." replied Gert, imitating her grandly. ". . . come out of it, Lottie—this is Gert!"

"Yes . . . and I poked you in the nose once for . . ."

"You did? . . ."

"Yes, I did . . ." and Lurline turned away as Blondie stared at them dully.

Blondie walked over to her mother, who was dabbing a crumpled handkerchief to her reddened eyes. Mrs. Callahan was silently trying to comfort her, patting her gently on the shoulder.

"I know it won't be easy for you at first, but I'll let you have what I can from my pay out of the show . . ." began Blondie, hoping that her mother would understand.

FATHER PRAISED

"We had your Pa then," said her mother. "He got $30 when he worked and you know he never spent anything on himself . . . he'd bring the check home and hand it to me . . . just like that . . . remember, Gert? He was a good man, your Pa!"

"Don't I know he was good," cried Blondie, trying hard to control herself. Then gently, "I'll be good to you, too, Ma. But you'll just have to get along on what I—er—really earn . . ." Blondie stopped as her mother began to cry again. "Ma I have to—can't you see, Ma—I have to do what Pa would want me to do," pleaded Blondie.

"Any post now will bring me that letter from Hollywood," said Pete, suddenly, trying to draw attention to himself. "If I land that job for the movies it'll take me off your hands—did I tell you about that, Blondie?"

"I wrote a swell detective yarn in three days," he boasted. "It's better than 'Sherlock Holmes', ain't it, Gert?"

There was an obvious silence, and the raucous street noises filled the flat. Blondie turned to her mother again.

"Well, that's all there is—I've got to look out for myself—I want to marry one of these days and have kids . . ."

LURLINE WARNS BLONDIE

"Well, I'm going to live on what I make from the show—that's all," and she moved toward the door.

"You're going to work in that show on the day of your Pa's funeral?" asked Ma, surprised.

"If Pa were watching—and I think he is—he'd know that what I'm doing is right," Blondie replied.

"Blondie's eccentricity! You kill me, Lottie," said Gert.

"I will one day!" came back Lurline. Then, turning to Blondie, she said: "Come on, Miss McClune—get your hips out of here."

"Do you think I should write and thank Mr. Pratt on behalf of the family?" asked Pete.

"He's been thanked enough," declared Lurline.

"No—please don't . . ." said Blondie, as she kissed her mother lovingly. "Goodbye all!"

LURLINE ANNOYED

"You say your Pa would like you to do what you're doing?" Pete said. "Do you think he'd like to see us living from hand to mouth again—like we used to?"

"Aw, she's upset now—I know how she feels . . ." declared Gert, as the two girls left the flat, followed by Mrs. Callahan, who never took part in the McClune family discussions.

As they reached the stairway Mrs. Callahan whispered: "Blondie's right—I wish you'd do the same, Lottie. I'd like to see you two kids come home and find two nice young men of your own class . . ."

"Mother, mother, mother, mother . . ." said Lurline, very much annoyed. "Goodbye, dear . . ." and she kissed her mother hastily.

"Goodbye, then, children—take care of yourselves . . ." Mrs. Callahan called as the girls went down the stairs.

"Remember the first time I came down here with you in the car?"

"I certainly envied you."

"Yes, everything—and nothing."

BOTH LOVE LARRY

"Oh, I want love; I want to be in love."

"Aren't you?"

"I guess we both are, aren't we?"

"Why do you keep bringing up Larry Belmont? Forget him! I have."

"No, you haven't forgotten him, and I haven't, either."

Lurline looked away. "Oh, I hate this part of town." Then to the chauffeur: "Come on, can't you hurry, please? . . . We're not going to a funeral . . ." Catching herself, Lurline looked sympathetically at Blondie.

"Oh, I'm sorry, kid . . . I didn't mean to bring it up . . . I'm sorry."

"I know." Blondie said, simply, and the two girls lapsed into silence.

Blondie was whistling . . . whistling like a little boy in the dark to mask his fears . . . whistling the little tune that Pa used to hum when they sat on the fire escape those long summer evenings in the past, holding hands . . . and dreaming of the future. "Pa! Pa!" Blondie cried suddenly. Then her voice broke into sobs. "Oh, I loved him so! . . . I loved him . . ."

Heart of a Wife

The Prisoners Are Taken to the Bungalow

Lillian's hand gripped my arm at Lee Chow's significant words, and again she spoke from the side of her mouth.

"Here's where we fade from the picture," she said. "However, I'm not going until I receive my notice."

I tried to keep my muscles from nervous trembling, and found that I had my work cut out for me. For as I looked from one resolute face to another of the men carrying on this impromptu tribunal, and saw the sudden stark terror in the eyes of the prisoners as Lee Chow said: "We shall have to try the other," I felt as if the door had opened suddenly upon some dark and terrible hidden room, the existence of which I had not before dreamed.

"The third degree," Lillian had said, half lightly a little earlier. But there was nothing light, nothing half way in the facial expressions of anyone in the room. What means did they plan, these grim resolute men, to compel the admissions they wished from the bound prisoners? Suddenly I felt that I was looking into the faces of strangers, these stern warders into whom my father, my husband and my friends had suddenly been transformed.

Lee Chow said something in a low tone to my father, and he came over to us.

"The bungalow is all ready for our guests, is it not?" he said.

"Yes, father." My throat was suddenly dry as I articulated the words, and he shot a keen look at me.

"You should be in bed, darling," he said. "Lillian, will you see that she goes to her room directly? We shall not need either of you again tonight, Katherine, of course, will stay here with her patient. Lee Chow tells me we shall not need him again either. You can give him a sedative and get him off to sleep as soon as possible."

MADGE RESTLESS

"Come on, Madge," Lillian said briskly. "Bed for you. I hope you will have news for us in the morning." She turned to my father.

"I trust so," he replied.

We went away upon that word, and Lillian did not leave me until I was undressed and ready for bed.

"Did you notice," I queried as she was about to leave me, "that those men kept refusing to answer something Lee Chow asked?"

"Yes, I noticed," she said shortly.

"Do you think they will keep on refusing?"

"Who knows?" She spread her hands in a little Gallic gesture. "But it will be just too bad if they don't—for them. Don't think anything more about the mess, Madge. It'll be cleared up by morning, never fear, and—what we don't know won't bother us. Go to sleep."

But there was no sleep for me for hours. When Lillian had gone, I arose and softly turned the key in the lock. Then I turned out my light and looked out of my window toward the bungalow.

A SINISTER SOUND

The door opened, and in the sudden light, a figure that I recognized as Dicky's came out, and in another minute was joined by someone that I judged to be Jim. My window, as always, was open, and I heard Dicky giving low-toned directions, and then Jim's voice said, "All right, sir. I'll fetch them directly." He went away again, while Dicky stood at the door, and returned almost at once with a wheelbarrow full of something that I could not recognize until the door opened again to admit them. Then I saw that Jim was carrying firewood into the bungalow, and my throat constricted with vague terror.

It was a late summer night. True, I had had grate fires at this season before. But this was an unusually warm night.

I refused even to think of the question further. But I could not keep my eyes from the chimney of the bungalow.

With the feeling that I must not watch any longer, I crept back into bed, and lay there, trying to sleep, shaking with nervousness, half consciously straining my ears for sounds from the bungalow. I could hear nothing at first, but a little later, when I was half dozing, I found myself suddenly sitting up straight in bed at a queer sinister sound, something like the yelp of a dog suddenly hurt.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Members of the Washington Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club which meets every Saturday morning at the Washington Theater, Washington, Pa., have been rehearsing a minstrel show for some time and it was going to be the high spot of their summer entertainment.

However, so many of the members have gone on vacations with the mothers and fathers, that Manager M. M. Wear has been requested to postpone the show until just before school starts. So the long awaited minstrel show will be presented the end of this month.

IN SHOW CAST

The members of the club participating in the Washington Junior Komic Club minstrel show are: Soloists, Marion Kemp, Ethel Grinage, Margurite Birmingham, Virginia McDonald, Gloria Conselmi, Romain Tate, Virginia Hinerman, Thais Bowers, Alice Gloady, Rita Folino, Edna Cunningham, Donna Fay Walker, Gale Hartzell, Myrtle Shelton, Velma McVehil, Virginia McVehil and Mary Jane Irwin.

MINSTREL MEN

Roger Doyle will be the interlocutor and the end men are to be Stanley Wolfe and Billy Brownlee.

Miss Irene Fisher will accompany the members on the organ and Manager Wear, with the cooperation of Miss Fisher, has directed and written the complete script.

The members of the Arsenal Chapter of the club were the guests of the Heinz Company today. They were taken through the big plant and were then given a lunch consisting of the Heinz products.

"LUCKY BUCK" PICNIC

On Friday, August 26, it is expected that most of the Komic Club members and their friends will attend the "Lucky Buck" picnic which will be held at Kennywood Park.

On that day the following rides and amusement devices will sell each youngster a ticket good for one ride for 10 "bucks"—old mill, tumble bug, merry-go-round, chair-o-plane, racer, jack rabbit, tilt-a-whirl, whip, miniature railroad, ferris wheel and the bughouse.

Just think, kiddies! All you'll have to do is to pull out your bankroll and peel of two "5's" or a "5," two "2's" and a "1," or any combination that will make 10 "bucks," buy your ticket and ride.

MORE 'BUCKS'

To enable each youngster to get a great big bankroll, the Sun-Telegraph has been printing each day, and will continue to print each day extra "Lucky Bucks" until the day of the picnic. So be sure to have your mother or daddy get the daily Sun-Telegraph for you each night.

And on Sunday the comic weekly of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will again be jammed full of "Lucky Bucks." Don't miss it, and before the day of the picnic you'll have a great big bankroll.

Science and Invention

Today it gives us great pleasure to introduce the Doakes Voting Machine invented by Gussie V. Doakes, who thinks while he sits and sits while he thinks. Hearing that the leaders of the nation were trying to think of ways and means of getting out the vote, Mr. Doakes decided that many people failed to vote because they didn't want to vote. A special feature of the Doakes device is a large substantial crank which can be turned to register unqualified disapproval of all the candidates.

No Star-Chamber Rule!

The Whole Appropriations Committee Should Be Called to Consider the Harris Resolution.

Senator Frank J. Harris has demanded of Chairman Harry B. Scott of the Senate Appropriations Committee that he call a meeting of that whole committee. It is to this committee, headed by Scott, that Harris' resolution for an investigation of the Public Service Commission and public utilities has been referred. It is of tremendous importance that this resolution shall be dealt with through no one-man authority.

Not only every member of the committee and the Senate, but the public generally, should support the demand of Harris.

It was from this committee, that, without a meeting, came the revised economy bill, nullifying reductions in the cost of state government which had been ordered by the House.

Whether this was right or wrong as a matter of governmental economy, it was certainly wrong as a matter of representative government.

Senator Harris says the committee has not met in three years, that its findings have been the opinion of the chairman and two or three strong political figures. The best evidence that the committee was intended to be a real committee is that 46 of the 50 Senators comprise its membership.

Senator Harris has done well to raise this issue and force it into the open, to fight star-chamber government.

The Assembly's Mistake

It Will Invite More Criticism by Dodging Unemployment Relief Than By Levying Reasonable Taxes.

The open letter of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor to the members of the General Assembly, calling upon them to adopt some form of taxation that will provide money for unemployment relief, is a straw showing in which direction the wind is blowing.

The adoption by the League for Social Justice at its "town meeting" in West Park Thursday night of a resolution calling on the Legislature to pass an income tax bill to help the destitute is another straw of the same kind.

The Legislature, during seven weeks of the special session, has been dodging every sort of tax proposal or other proposal for raising money for the unemployed.

Every sort of tax proposal brings criticism, of course; but the lawmakers are making a mistake in heeding the opponents of taxation rather than those who are calling for unemployment relief.

The criticism that would be evoked by a reasonable tax measure would be mild in comparison with the storm of censure that will fall upon the Legislature if it adjourns without granting relief, without carrying out the purpose for which it was convened.

Pistol Permits

The Number of Persons Who Think It Is Necessary to Carry Firearms Is Disturbing.

It is disturbing to learn that 2,000 persons have been granted permits to carry pistols in Allegheny County outside of the city, while many others have been authorized to carry them in the city.

The disturbing thing is that so large a number should consider it necessary, as protection against assassins and highwaymen, to go armed. It is a shocking sidelight on the crime situation.

It is doubtful if carrying a pistol furnishes as much protection as is supposed. To be of service the pistol must be loaded and ready for instant use, and there is always danger of accident when a loaded pistol is handy.

John Volpe had a pistol permit, but he was caught unarmed, as were also his brothers, James and Arthur.

Sheriff Gollmar, deciding to reduce the number of pistol carriers, has revoked the permits of Louis and Guy Volpe. In view of the assassination of their three brothers, they, it seems, could offer good reasons for being allowed to carry firearms.

The chief menace lies not in those who carry pistols with permission, but in those who carry them without permission. Goodness only knows how many of the latter there are in the county.

With murders and highway robberies occurring daily, applicants for pistol permits may say, with some shadow of justification, that since the police are unable to protect the citizens they feel it is necessary to be prepared to protect themselves.

The Police Convention

Views on Political Interference With the Public Safety Would Be Interesting

Pittsburgh is glad to be host this week to the National Fraternal Order of Police, an organization in whose founding local policemen played a prominent part.

We welcome the coming of hundreds of delegates from all parts of the United States to Pittsburgh and hope that their discussions will be fruitful of benefit not only to members of the order but to policemen generally.

Policemen have no enviable task. They are compelled frequently to risk, sometimes to sacrifice, their lives in protecting the public. Their rewards are none too high.

To make their work still more difficult they are subjected in certain places, notably in Pittsburgh, to political interference. Their jobs are treated as the spoils of office, and not seldom are taken from efficient men who have failed to gain the good will of political bosses and given to inefficient "ward heelers."

Political interference is also responsible for the protection of racketeers who prey on the public with their bootlegging and gambling operations and other forms of commercial vice. All but a possible tiny minority of policemen would be glad, we feel confident, to have a free hand in dealing with vice.

It would be interesting to hear the views of the delegates to the policemen's convention on this important subject.

Hearst Papers Advocate:

2.—Adoption of 5 per cent sales tax and reduction in income taxes, releasing income to finance industry.

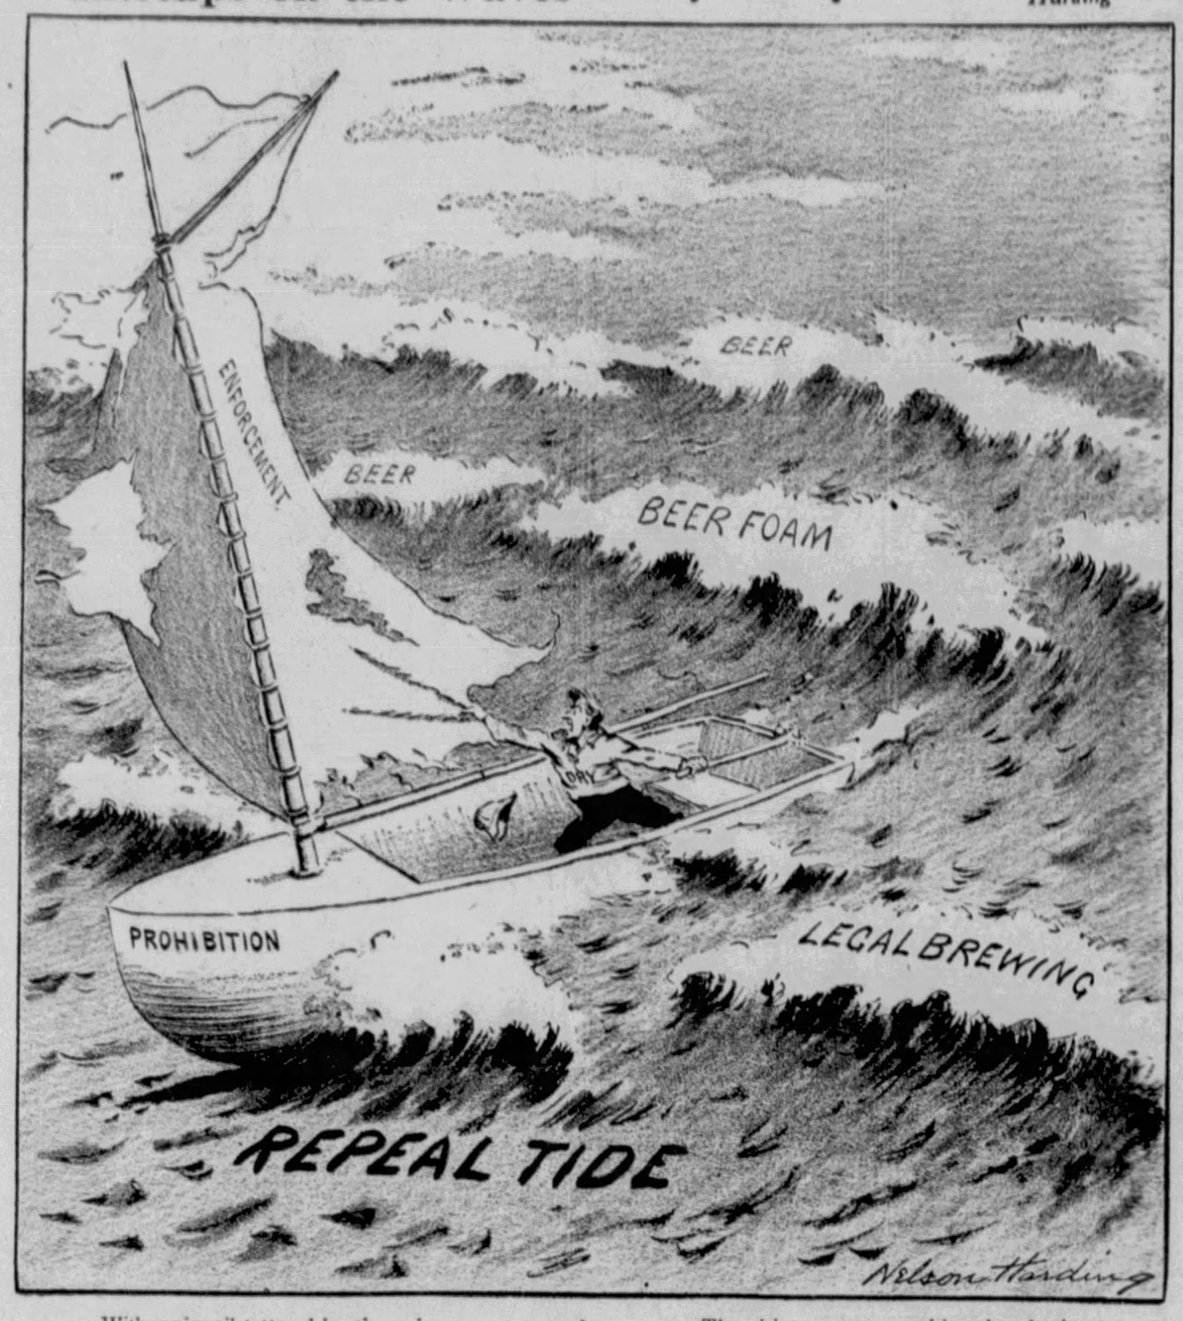
Whitecaps on the Waves

By Nelson Harding



With mainsail tattered by the gale
The boat is swept along.
It cannot sail against a tide
Now running high and strong.

The rising waves are whipped to froth
And foam flies on the blast.
In such a storm we're wondering
How long the boat can last.

Marry-Go-Round

Husbands—Before and After

No man thinks he is marrying a stupid girl, when she has enough intelligence to know what a lucky little thing she is to get such a prize.

* * *

When a man begins telling a woman his love-troubles, it may mean only that he wants sympathy or an audience; but when he begins telling her his business troubles, she can go right ahead and plan the wedding decorations.

* * *

* * *

A man's mind is always more serene and peaceful than a woman's, because his soul is never harried by such little things as the fear that some other man at the beach-party may have on a newer or cuter bathing-suit than his.

* * *

You can't buy real love—but a man will never give up the hope that he can buy "something just as good' and a lot less bothersome.

* * *

A modern girl is strong enough to survive a broken engagement and even a broken heart and a few shattered illusions—but a sprained vanity is just as painful and hard to cure as it ever was.

"The Great Open Spaces" are those in a modern girl's stockings, a modern man's heart—and, sometimes, in a Cutie's head.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—This is not a pretty pastel of the literary work, but it comes from an earnest, distinguished man of letters. As such, it should be of special interest to ambitious writers, so many of whom write about their hopes and fears. Here it is:

"I do not believe there are in the world today more than 200 men and women making enormous money, writing. When I say enormous money, I am thinking of something around $100,000 a year. This is not so big in big professions—law, banking, medicine and even among movie stars.

"I know perhaps a thousand famous writers, poets and artists who, when not in galling poverty, are in shabby-genteel, just-getting-along niches of life. Most of them have aching worries regarding the future and a dependent old age. Take yourself as a fairly conspicuous example.

"You are a protagonist of the modern whirl. I do not know your income, although I suspect it is rather large. Yet if, as in the old days before the syndication, you were paid by a single newspaper, the returns would be comparatively insignificant. Not more than $5,000 a year at topmost.

"Well, illiterate gag men, brewing sewage combustion from the gutters, make thrice that working for a single firm in Hollywood. Richard Harding Davis, who with Irvin Cobb and Frank Ward O'Malley, was one of the three best reporters, left about $3,000. In any other calling he would have amassed $500,000.

"But for sales and resale of movie rights after death there would be no estate. Our benign government does not encourage the writer, whose professional life is 10 years. It taxes him, and unjustly, more than big business which, incidentally, put America in the frightful dilemma she is in today.

* * *

"Such a gloriously magnificent writer as Don Marquis has been lured—and who can blame him?—from literature by fancy salaries of the movies. One of his talented and devoted admirers once wrote: 'O rare Don Marquis! Devout and ribald spirit, he has also known the Tavern of Despair, whose fireside bench is well polished by many old customers.' Don, in Hollywood, found making a living a minor technique. His 'tavern of despair' today is a Spanish castle with flaming awnings and a patio. To literature's eternal loss!

* * *

"Poe, penniless, has many replicas. You know them as well as I. Indeed, you were dining with three the last time we met. Talented fellows of infinite genius and writing charm, hacking at penny-liners and ticking off sonnets to assuage hunger. Even a monger of scandal makes 10 times what the average forthright novelist does, who gives purity to his far worthier literary ideals.

* * *

"I am not embittered. You, I think, know that. I have educated my children in the best colleges and launched them successfully in life. I have a good home and live well. I am known as a writer, but most of my income has come from side-lines. Save for my multiple outside activities, I could not have made more than $5,000 a year. Thus have I gone adventuring with many cargoes, and I have worked from 12 to 14 hours a day for 25 years.

* * *

"There is no money writing books, and how many playwrights wind up in the opulence of the banker, some of whom are proving crooks. One of the most famous playwrights is supported by old friends. You can see many of them who authored successes of other years, around the Players and the Lambs, showing seedy through the tatters of time.

"I saw all this years ago, and decided to scatter my fire. I have written books, plays and even newspaper columns, and I never wrote a line of which I was ashamed. Yet my biggest income has come through writing advertisement booklets, brochures for varied commercial activities, but they took much out of me. I could have written far better books without such millstones around my neck.

* * *

"Finally, let no one envy the so-called famous novelist or playwright. I have passed three along the street within the past six months. They were riding the big breaker in their day, yet it would be a strain for most people to recall them today. Europe remembers its writers by public squares and pensions and streets named for them. In America we pay this deference to the Jimmy Walkers."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I am afraid
Of one thing only—
I am afraid
Of Myself.

I am no longer
Afraid of sickness,
Nor of poverty,
Nor of injustice
Nor of slander,
Nor of loneliness,
Nor of hate,
Nor of weariness,
Nor of failure,
Nor of shame;
Once I feared
These things—but now
They have all happened,
And I have discovered
Their secret;
I do not fear them
Any more.

I am not afraid
Of growing old—
There's the sharpest fear
For most women—
But I saw
Old Age coming
And beat it
To the clinch—
So I'm not afraid
Of growing old.

I'm not even afraid
Of Death, any more—
Of Death taking
What I loved most.
I was afraid of that
For so long—
But it's over.
Death has given me
The works.
I'm not afraid
Of Death, any more.

Now I'm afraid
Of one thing only—
I am afraid of Myself.

I am afraid of
The things in myself—
The meanness, the lies,
The cowardice and greed,
The conceit and self-pity,
The malice and laziness,
The dirtiness and cruelty,
The stupidity and rage,
In myself.
I am afraid
Of these things.

ALONE,
HAVE POWER OVER ME.

The other things
Which I feared—
The outside things—
They have no power
Unless I give them power
By letting them in.
No matter how frightful
They may seem
I can take them,
Or leave them,
It's up to me.
BUT THE THINGS IN MYSELF,
THEY ARE WITH ME, ALWAYS.
THEY ARE REAL—
THEY ARE MYSELF—
AND AS LONG AS THEY CONTINUE,
I AM IN THEIR POWER.

I am in
My own power,
In the power of
My own goodness,
Or by own badness;
I can send myself
To hell—or heaven.
I, alone,
Am responsible
For what I am and
For where I go.

I am afraid
Of one thing only—
I am afraid
Of my own power
Over Myself.

Isn't It So?

Text For Today

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John, xiv:6.

Better Trade Sentiment Sets Stage for Real Relief for the Jobless

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

THE GAINS in the security markets represent the return of hope and courage, which had been oozed out of the price structure.

In the last analysis, the justification of any price structure will hinge on corporate earnings. These, in turn, depend on fundamental balancing of the needs of the country against its great facilities for production.

The soundness of any "managed recovery" will depend on THE RETURN OF IDLE MEN AND WOMEN TO PRODUCTIVE PAYROLLS.

Any discounting of such a development without the consummation of practical plans to absorb the unemployed will lead only to disappointment and loss.

The rally in the markets represents the striking up of the band to the tune of economic recovery, but the real test will come when the shock troops of business are called upon to march.

THE ADMINISTRATION, which at times had been content to let nature take its course, however unseemly, no longer assumes that negative philosophical attitude. It doubtless feels that, unless genuine relief comes before election day, nature will take its course under democratic auspices.

Hence its growing eagerness, through a bond pool and through a proposed commodity pool, to quicken the recuperative processes.

A RECOVERY, WHICH IS BASED SOLELY ON MARKING UP PRICES, WILL OF COURSE PROVE EPHEMERAL.

The price advance and the improvement of sentiment are, however, necessary forerunners of far reaching economic gains, BUT THEY MUST BE SUPPORTED BY SOLID JOB CREATING PROJECTS

The stage is set for an effective use of a LARGE SCALE PROGRAM OF CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC WORKS.

But unfortunately, still seized by the spirit of panic while Congress remained in session, PRESIDENT Hoover SHIED AWAY from the very type of public works relief which SECRETARY Hoover had ARDENTLY SPONSORED in 1923.

But, despite coolness in the White House, Congress in the Garner-Wagner relief act, put through a provision authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend up to $1,500,000,000 for self liquidating public and semi-public construction projects.

Given enthusiastic and courageous prompt ENFORCEMENT, this provision could throw the balance of economic forces on the side of business recovery.

WITH AN equilibrium established in business in recent months at a level of maximum depression, which means suffering and privation for millions of American families, the balance can be tilted toward genuine recuperation through launching a program for constructing capital goods.

Such a use of public funds is far more socially justifiable than advances by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to bail out private bankers of bonds in which they lost faith.

The rebirth of faith in American economic institutions should promptly be followed up by private and public credit policies, which will make for an immediate expansion in construction work, SO THAT LARGE NUMBERS MAY BE REDEEMED FROM IDLENESS.

A RESTFUL PICTURE

By Winifred Black

The Wise Woman came to see me the other day.

I don't think she likes me very well, and I don't blame her for that; I don't like her very well, either. I wonder why she comes to see me anyhow.

But she did come, and she didn't like the way my little sitting room was arranged. She didn't like it at all.

She thought the piano was in the wrong place. To be quite frank about it, she didn't see why I had a piano there at all. Nobody plays the piano any more, not when they can get a perfectly good radio, or maybe a uke or so.

And the way I had the chairs—why, it was outrageous! People don't group chairs close to a fireplace any more. As a matter of fact, they don't group them at all.

Formality is the thing. To be quite in the mode, your living room must look as if it was furnished by an interior decorator—somebody with a pain in his liver and a continuous grouch in his heart.

Pictures?

It's an etching of sheep. They are huddled together on a hill top, just at the break of dawn, and when you look at that picture you can hear the lambs saying things to each other about how hungry they are and how much they think of their wooly old mothers. You can smell the clover in the fields, and you can feel the dew on the grass, and hark! Is that the meadow lark or a bobolink beginning to call?

It rests me; that picture does. It reminds me that there are places in the world where there are no elevated railroads, no subways, no cable cars, no traffic laws, no loud speakers and no determined reformers; just quiet, fragrant, pleasant places, where you can take a long breath, and live; places where you like to get up in the morning and have a cup of home-made coffee, a slice of home-made bread and some sweet butter, and honey in the comb, and feel that you've had a real breakfast.

It reminds me of places where you can see the dawn, and watch the evening star, and try to make up your mind whether you like the broad face of the full moon better than you like its little, silvery crescent.

"Heavens," said the Wise Woman, "nobody has pictures on the walls any more, they mess things up so!

"What you want, you know, my dear, is space, and elegance, and formality. That's the thing, now."

I wish I had a place on the wall where that picture would get even a better light than it has now. I'd hang it there this very minute.

I know the Wise Woman would be really shocked, but somehow I can't seem to care so very much about that.
